'STOP SPOON-FEEDING'

Gov't Aims to Slash UIC Claims by 10%

OTTAWA (CP) — In a move "to stop spoon-feeding," Employment Minister Bud Cullen today announced proposals that would reduce the number of unemployment insurance claimants by about 10 per cent after new rules took full effect.

Cullen coupled his proposal for major cost-cutting surgery on the unemployment insurance program with announcement of plans to spend $710 million on job creation in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

The Cullen proposals would require legislation to take effect and bills probably will be introduced in the fall session of Parliament unless it is dissolved for a general election.

Hardest hit by the proposed changes to the unemployment program would be young persons, those returning to the labor force after a long absence and repeating claimants.

Cullen could not give reporters an estimate of how many persons would be affected by the tighter rules, but an official from his department later said that by 1980-81 the changes would have the effect of disqualifying about 263,000 of the approximately 2½ million benefit claims that would normally be filed.

Cullen acknowledged at a news conference that young persons in particular would be affected by the unemployment insurance changes.

"But we have to stop the spoon-feeding aspect ... to stop making it too easy for them."

Cullen said the increased job opportunities as a result of more government spending in that area "will counteract the negative impact" of unemployment insurance cuts.

The job-creation spending would create what he described as 113,000 work years of employment and involve 368,000 persons in jobs and training.

He said he could not give a detailed breakdown of what a work-year would involve in terms of numbers of jobs and the lengths of those jobs. That would depend, to some extent, on agreements with the provinces.

Cullen said the aim of tightening the unemployment insurance program, which he described as too generous, is to "increase incentives to work."

Proposed changes to the unemployment insurance program would result in savings of $580 million in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Cullen proposed increased entrance requirements for repeating claimants who have already received unemployment insurance benefits in the year before their latest claim and for new entrants to the work force.

The government also proposes to move toward "special recovery from high-income unemployment

$10M Postal Thefts Bared

MONTREAL (CP) — Police say investigations have begun in major Canadian cities to find out whether similar rings of thieves exist to one that has stolen up to $10 million in goods from the mails in Montreal during the last two years.

Two postal employees, a truck driver and a supervisor, arrested Thursday in connection with the ring were to be arraigned in sessions court today. The arrests followed an 18-month investigation and more are expected, although the size of the ring is not yet known, a police spokesman said.

A Post Office official said the two had been suspended pending the outcome of the charges.

Constable Norman Couillard, a Montreal police spokesman, said postal trucks had been robbed three or four times a month of cash, jewels, furs and expensive clothing, and estimated that each heist netted at least $200,000.

The thefts were made only from trucks containing valuable merchandise and never occurred twice in the same place.

In other cases, mailing addresses were changed and stolen goods loaded on particular trucks. A driver posing in an official uniform would drive the vehicle to a designated area and unload it, returning it empty to the postal station.

"We will never be able to determine with absolute precision the exact amount the members of this ring accumulated in a little more than two years," Couillard said. "The sum of $10 million is more than reasonable in this case."

A spokesman for the post office in Vancouver said there is no indication of any organized ring operating out of either the Vancouver or Victoria offices.

He was unable to say whether either centre figures in the Montreal-based investigation.

Jaunt by Judges Raising a Storm

VANCOUVER — Teachers were flown to Vancouver from Ottawa to teach English to a group of federal judges from Quebec, according to the Vancouver Province.

A political storm is building over the judges' expenses-paid trip, but the federal justice department refuses to say why the course is being held in Vancouver, 3,152 miles (5,073 kilometres) from Quebec City.

The group includes about 25 judges and, with their wives and the teachers, the entire entourage numbers about 60 people.

There were calls Thursday for the resignation of the judges' spokesman, lawyer Roger Collette, who had told the Province that the taxpayers are paying for the 12-day course at the Bayshore Inn, but he wanted no publicity.

John Fraser, Conservative MP for Vancouver South, wants to raise the matter in the Commons. He said "Mr. Collette's position ought to be under serious consideration.

"His usefulness is extremely limited because of his remarkable attitude and his irresponsible statements."

Outraged members of the public called the Province, protesting Collette's remarks and demanding that he be fired.

A senior Ottawa civil servant said: "If Collette said those things, he's crazy."

Collette, who also is staying at the Bayshore, denied talking to the Province. He said Thursday that he has not decided yet whether to sue the Province for alleged libel.

Essentially the same comments which appeared in the Province Thursday appeared also in Thursday editions of The Sun.

Asked if he will resign, he said there is no reason why he should. But he refused to answer any further questions about the course and its cost.

The federal justice department is investigating the remarks attributed to Collette, who described himself as deputy commissioner for federal judicial affairs in Ottawa.

A senior aide to Justice Minister Otto Lang said that Collette, who organized the English course, is on contract to the judicial affairs department — but is not deputy commissioner.

The spokesman was unable to say how much the course, which ends today, will cost, but hopes to be able to find out by early next week.

He said Lang has been told about the situation.

"Mr. Lang wants to make it clear that all members of the public have a right to this information," said the aide.

Quebec Appeal Court Judge Andre Dube, one of the judges on the course, said in clear English: "It is an intensive course, and we are talking English as much as we can and are benefiting a lot. At least one-third of our cases are in English. I think the fuss is for nothing."

Judge Dube confirmed that there are about 25 judges on the course and that some of the English teachers had been flown to Vancouver from Ottawa and other parts of the country.

The judges are getting a special government rate at the hotel and, Judge Dube said, they are paying for meals out of their own pockets. He said they had flown to Vancouver on advance-purchase tickets, not first-class tickets.

Players One, PWA Zero

VERNON (CP) — A chartered Pacific Western Airlines 737 made an unscheduled flight to Kelowna from Calgary Thursday when 127 lacrosse players, officials and wives refused to get off the plane in Calgary.

The four teams, representing Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, were bound for the Canadian senior B lacrosse championship here.

The pilot and air crew expected everyone to disembark when the plane landed at Calgary but everyone stayed on board, a team official said.

Art Rattle, spokesman for the Ontario Lacrosse Association who was on the plane in Calgary, said: "We just stayed put and told them we weren't going to move. I think the air crew expected us to get off but we were told when we left Toronto that we were going to land in Kelowna."

Following a 40-minute meeting with PWA officials and a team official in Calgary, the plane refueled and took off for Kelowna landing at 4:40 a.m.

Munro Orders Talks

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Labor Minister John Munro today personally intervened in the Air Canada dispute.

He called on Air Canada president Claude Taylor and the negotiating team for the International Associations of Machinists to meet him Sunday morning at an Ottawa hotel.

The talks will last as long as there appears any possibility of reaching a settlement, a spokesman for Munro said.

Talks broke off indefinitely Thursday night between Air Canada and the union representing 7,500 locked-out ground-service workers following a clear victory within the union for supporters of a tough position and its rejection by the airline.

A brief meeting Thursday evening between the two sides ended abruptly when the airline, now in the eighth day of a shutdown, said it could not agree to demands by the International Association of Machinists that it withdraw three contentious clauses from a contract proposal.

Chief union negotiator Barry Shaw, who has faced several challenges from inside the union, appeared crestfallen at the turn of events.

In an apparent reproach to the 13-member negotiating team, the union's national executive board voted earlier to support demands for withdrawal of the three clauses. Some of the negotiators had said they would accept a compromise.

The two sides were close to agreement on most issues but became bogged down over the three clauses, dealing with longer disciplinary suspensions, job classification of cargo handlers, and travel time by employees on union business.

"We have just been advised by the union that unless the three items are withdrawn, there is no point in carrying on with the negotiations," chief Air Canada negotiator Norm Radford told reporters as he left the meeting only 25 minutes after it began.

"We are prepared to nego-

MP Guilty

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — Independent MP Gilbert Rondeau, found guilty Friday on charges of arson and conspiracy, has been ordered to appear in sessions court on Sept. 11 for sentencing.

Judge Denis Bouchard agreed to let Rondeau, who represents Shefford riding and is the first sitting MP to be convicted of an indictable offence since 1947, remain free until sentencing. The delay in sentencing was granted at the request of defence lawyer Paul Lesage.

Jacques Harbec testified Rondeau paid him $1,500 to set the fire.

Dollar Fails To Break 87¢

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar gained slightly on New York money markets Thursday, but failed to break above the 87 U.S. cent level.

In London, the U.S. dollar improved against the British pound and the Japanese yen today but the rate in other major European currencies slid some more.

Legal Pot Possession Urged by Bar

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association on Thursday became the last major body of lawyers in North America to recommend modification of marijuana laws.

It passed a resolution recommending that the federal government decriminalize marijuana when owned or grown for personal adult use. The resolution also said that "the non-profit transfer of small amounts" between adult users should no longer be criminal.

Ted Seifred of Vancouver, who proposed the measure, said that last year 2,240 individuals went to jail for simple possession of marijuana and there were 37,862 convictions altogether — mostly for simple possession.

He said the American Bar Association favors decriminalization and the Canadian Medical Association in 1969 had said marijuana laws did more harm to users than marijuana itself.

"The only organization of doctors and lawyers in North America that has not come out for decriminalization is the Canadian Bar Association," Seifred said.

The resolution prompted some protest.

Bill Thompson of Peterborough, Ont., said the meeting will go down in history as the one that said "yes to pot, no to the Queen."

Bill Brown of St. John's Nfld., challenged Seifred's contention that medical criticisms of marijuana have mainly turned out to be myths.

"There must be some bad effects," said Brown, an older delegate. "Why were those 37,000 prosecuted? Are all the judges and prosecutors in this country crazy?"

His intervention was met with laughter from an audience mainly comprised of young lawyers.

"It isn't fitting for the Canadian Bar Association to encourage the use of marijuana," Brown said, adding that the only user he had ever known had stolen a car.

But Morris Manning of Toronto said that as a controlled substance under the Food and Drug Act, marijuana would still be subject to control.

'McGeer Has No Right To Judge'

Education Minister Pat McGeer has no right to judge teachers found guilty of marijuana offences but discharged by the courts, B.C. Teachers Federation president Pat Brady said today.

Court discharges should be upheld by school boards and the ministry, Brady said in an interview.

Brady, who said the BCTF does not condone the use of drugs, said McGeer's decision to revoke the licences of teachers found guilty in the future of marijuana offences puts them in "double jeopardy."

He also criticized McGeer's decision to review the granting of teaching certificates and to ask the person seeking a certificate whether he uses drugs.

"We see this as an invasion of privacy and a violation of the individual's civil liberties," he said.

Brady said teachers should only lose their jobs over drug charges if the courts convict and sentence them.

McGeer said Thursday he was disappointed with a decision by the Coquitlam school board to reinstate auto mechanics teacher Dennis Hilton, 29, after he was found guilty but granted a conditional discharge on a charge of possession of marijuana.

He said pot-smoking teachers will be removed from the school system because educators have an obligation to maintain high moral standards.

Coquitlam school board chairman Eunice Parker said she finds McGeer's criticism incredible. School boards have no alternative under the Public Schools Act but to reinstate a teacher who is found guilty of a marijuana offence but receives a conditional or absolute discharge, she said.

Smedley accused McGeer of using school trustees as a "scapegoat" at a politically opportune time when school boards are under fire for high budgets.

UFAWU Blacklist Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — More trouble has broken out in the West Coast fishing industry as the Pacific Gillnetters Association has accused the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union of harassment and blacklisting because the gillnetters fished during the UFAWU's three-day strike in July.

PGA manager Kenneth Williamson said in an interview that at least 49 association members are on a UFAWU blacklist which has resulted in union members refusing to buy the gillnetters' fish, sell them ice or handle their nets.

He said the list is causing costly delays for those affected, who are now forced to deal with independent fish companies other than B.C. Packers and Canadian Fish Co.

George Hewison, UFAWU secretary-treasurer, said he had no comment on the PGA's charges.

The gillnetters have applied to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for a cease-and-desist order against the so-called scab list which Williamson said includes members of other non-union fishermen's associations and some independent fishermen.

The board held an informal hearing into the allegation last week and the PGA now is awaiting a decision on whether the charges fall within the board's jurisdiction or that of the courts.

"We want a cease-and-desist order that the list is no longer in effect so our members can sell their fish," Williamson said.

"We are non-union. During the strike, we did not cross picket lines. We didn't sell our fish to union places. We sold to independent companies."

But the union has launched an organized campaign against the two-year-old, 153-member gillnetters' association, and has urged a boycott of all their fish because they continued to fish despite the strike, Williamson said.

Williamson said that when a blacklisted fisherman pulls up to a union packer or cannery, he is told his catch won't be handled. This results in lost fishing time because the gillnetter must seek out a non-union operation to sell his fish, ice up and work on his net.

He said some fishermen have had their names removed from the list after visiting the union hall and justifying their fishing during the strike.

TOURIST RIP-OFF?

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Horner, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce, said Thursday that Canadian schools should teach children not to rip off tourists.

Horner said at a news conference that he hopes to meet provincial education ministers soon and make his suggestion to them.

Speaking about a new federal government report that indicates high prices and poor service keep United States tourists out of Canada, he said part of the problem is that Canada is relatively inexperienced in catering to tourists compared with Europe or the U.S.

B.C. travel industry minister Grace McCarthy reacted to the report by saying Canada's tourism industry should work to correct its problems rather than advertise them.

"What British Columbia did was not to study and make commentary to the world about how poor our service was — we just did something about it."

LOTTERY BREAK SOON: GRACE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Thursday she expects a break soon in the continuing provincial-federal squabble over lotteries.

Mrs. McCarthy said she expects B.C. lottery ticket distributors to hold off applying for computer terminal operation licences for the federal government's new $1 computer lottery until after results of the latest negotiations are known.

She made the remarks after Iona Campagnolo, federal minister responsible for lotteries, announced a new commission rate structure for distributors designed to compete with rates paid by provincial lotteries. (See story on page 27).

Mrs. McCarthy described the increase as another in a series of federal enticements to "undercut, out-advertise and out-attract" B.C. lottery customers.

Posties Could Walk Out Wednesday

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's 18,000 letter carriers will be in a legal strike position Wednesday following the failure of a mediation panel to resolve a pay dispute between the federal government and the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada.

Union leaders have sent strike ballots to all members and results of the vote are expected in about 12 days, a spokesman said Thursday.

The generally moderate letter carriers have not held a general strike since 1972 and union president Robert McGarry said at this stage he would use a strike mandate as a weapon in a further attempt at negotiations.

But if, the union fails to squeeze a larger wage offer out of restraint-conscious government negotiators, the letter carriers likely will end up walking the picket lines instead of their appointed rounds.

It is possible that the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) also will be in a legal strike position this fall. A conciliation board now is preparing a report aimed at settling the contract dispute between the government and CUPW, which represents mail sorters and postal clerks.

Brady Rakes McGeer

chairman Rubymay Parrott backed McGeer.

She said the provincial cabinet should intercede if the courts give a conditional or absolute discharge to a teacher found guilty of a marijuana offence.

"Teachers should be models students can look up to," Parrott said.

Greater Vancouver school board chairmen are generally supporting McGeer.

However, they said if he wants school boards to dismiss the teachers, he must first give them the power to do so.

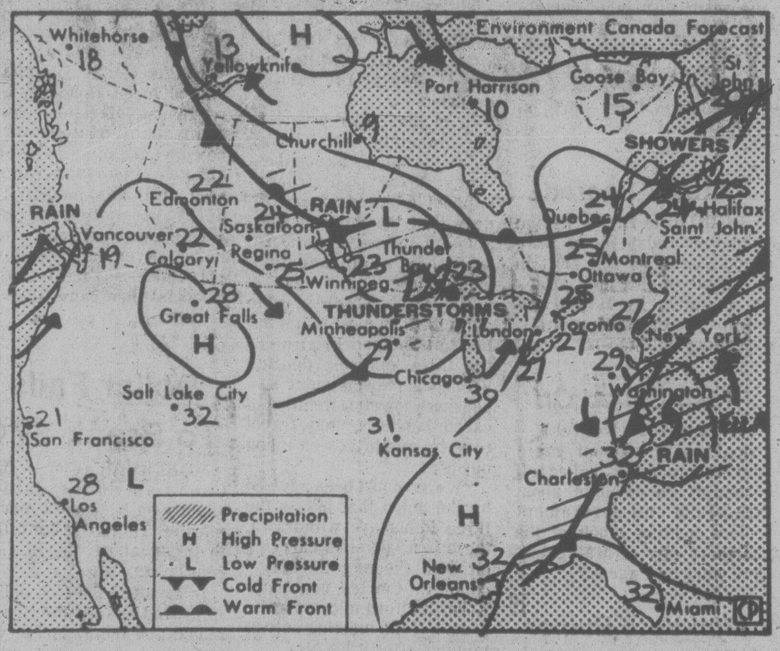
"As a parent, I sure don't want these people teaching my kids," said Betty-Anne Fenwick, Vancouver school board chairman. "I think teachers should have high moral standards."

Jack Smedley, chairman of the Delta school board, said teachers should be beyond reproach.

"It's not good enough for teachers to tell pupils what a good life is," he said. "They've got to set an example too.

Dr. Wendy Fidgeon, chairman of the Surrey school board, said she feels it is reasonable for the ministry to ask a prospective teacher whether he takes drugs because "they will be in charge of our children so we have a right to know what kind of people they are."

the weather



Map valid until noon Saturday

A series of disturbances from the Pacific will bring rain to all regions of the province from time to time today and Saturday.

After a very dry summer which led to a severe forest fire hazard in British Columbia, August reversed the trend, bringing a good supply of rain to most areas, particularly coastal regions.

Vancouver set an August record of 112.8 millimetres of rain. The previous mark of 101.1 was established in 1975.

A westerly flow of moist Pacific air with minor disturbances embedded in it will bring more wet weather today and Saturday and the extended outlook suggests this trend will continue through Sunday and Monday.

Amin Gets His Own Back

Despite snub, Charles appears to be looking at Amin during Kenyatta rites

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Ugandan President Idi Amin struck back today for the humiliating blow to his pride delivered by Prince Charles in an encounter between the two men a day before.

After being royally snubbed in his attempt to confront the heir to the British throne Thursday during funeral services for Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta, Amin sat glumly through the ceremony, just three seats away from Charles.

Today, Amin delivered his counterblow through Radio Uganda.

A report from Kampala said "Big Daddy," who has already given himself the title "Conqueror of the British Empire," left Kenyatta's funeral on foot and was surrounded by thousands of adoring Kenyans.

According to the Radio Uganda version of events, "President Amin was mobbed by crowds chanting 'Amin, the Savior of Africa,' and, 'Amin, the Lion of Africa.'"

It added the crowds were so large "that Prince Charles' car had to be diverted to an alternative route.

"The people were heard questioning themselves: 'Who is that white man using the same route as the Lion of Africa?'"

The encounter Thursday prickled at Amin's pride. Charles, resplendent in a white naval commander's uniform with gold piping, was already mingling with other dignitaries at the graveside in Kenya's parliament grounds when the hulking figure of Amin strode in with his small son, Mwanga.

As Amin shook hands with President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania — an old adversary who decided to be cordial in public — and with President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Charles turned quickly to another British official and plunged into animated conversation.

Amin stomped about impatiently for a few minutes at Charles' back, obviously waiting for the opportunity to confront the heir to the British throne, but eventually sat down disconsolately three chairs away from the prince.

It was apparently a deliberate ploy by the son of Queen Elizabeth II, whom Amin still refers to as "my commander in chief," to avoid an embarrassing meeting with Amin.

In 1976, Britain severed diplomatic relations with Amin's government — the first time it has done so with a commonwealth country — following the Israeli commando raid on Uganda's Entebbe Airport and the subsequent murder of a British-Israeli citizen, Dora Bloch, by Ugandan security men.

Moi Tightens Security

NAIROBI (UPI) — President Daniel Arap Moi today ordered Kenya's security forces to crush any threat to domestic peace, spelled out internal and economic policies and quickly set a date for the selection of the late Jomo Kenyatta's permanent successor.

Acknowledging Kenya faced a troublesome transition following the death of Kenyatta, Moi strongly indicated he himself would fill that post and become Kenya's second president. The cabinet issued a statement expressing "our total confidence and loyalty" in him.

Twenty-four hours after Kenyatta was buried with pomp at a grand state funeral, thus officially ending an era, Moi issued a statement to the nation, for the first time spelling out in depth the country's future course.

Moi made these key points:

— The country's only party, Kanu, will hold a special meeting Oct. 6 to choose a permanent successor to Kenyatta, widely expected to be Moi himself.

— He praised the Kenyan people for their "calm and sobriety" following Kenyatta's death Aug. 22 but warned the next 80 days would be fraught with danger and ordered Kenya's security forces to "maintain maximum vigilance and deal promptly with any possible threat to domestic peace."

— He said the government would not tolerate "tribalism, sectionalism and personality cults" but pledged to maintain individual and religious freedoms and "especially" the independence of the judiciary.

After Moi's statement, Finance Minister Mwai Kibaki read a statement saying the cabinet "do now proclaim and pledge our total loyalty to our President Moi and call upon all Kenyans to do the same."

FALLOPIAN SWAP SET

TAUNTON, England (UPI) — A woman has agreed to donate one of her Fallopian tubes to her childless twin sister for the world's first attempt at a Fallopian tube transplant, hospital sources said today.

Spokesmen for the Musgrove Park Hospital said they had been directed to make no official comment on a report of the planned transplant carried in a local newspaper.

The recipient of the donation was described as a woman in her early 30s "from the West country" whose Fallopian tubes are blocked. Her twin sister already has children and both husbands have agreed to the operation, the sources said.

No definite date for the operation has been disclosed.

If the delicate transplant — the 4-inch-long Fallopian tube is as wide as a piece of thread — can be achieved, the natural process of conveying a fertilized egg from the ovary to the womb can be restored for women with blocked tubes.

Nicaragua Guard Taking A Breather from Siege

MANAGUA (Reuter) — Nicaragua's national guard have called off their attempts to dislodge about 400 young anti-government rebels holding much of the northern city of Matagalpa.

But the Red Cross said national guardsmen planned to launch another assault Saturday against the rebels, some of them only 12 years old, who have kept them pinned down around their barracks by sniper fire.

Church representatives were trying to arrange a truce to head off the assault and halt the five days of street fighting, the Red Cross said.

More than 21 people have been killed and more than 100 injured in clashes.

The rebels, armed only with pistols and small calibre rifles, are supporting a national strike to bring down President Anastasio Somoza. They have thrown up barricades across streets and have vowed to fight to the end against President Somoza, whose family has ruled this Central American country for 45 years.

As the anti-Somoza strike appeared again to gain ground in the country, violence flared Thursday night in the capital of Managua and elsewhere.

Protesters attacked a national guard station and a patrol with home-made bombs, wounding one guardsman, eyewitnesses said.

Buses were set on fire and barricades went up in Managua's poor suburbs. Demonstrations and shootings were reported in other towns.

Attacks on buses led transport owners to announce they would join the strike.

CUBA WELCOMES PRISONERS

HAVANA (Reuter) — A group of prisoners who were among those released in Nicaragua when guerrillas took over the National Palace in Managua 10 days ago have arrived in Cuba.

The news agency Prensa Latina said 22 of the prisoners, including six women, arrived at Havana Airport Thursday from Panama.

They arrived amid reports that commando leader Eden Pastrga, the self-styled Major Zero who led the attack by left-wing guerrillas, had gone to San Jose, Costa Rica.

Romantic Robber Image Raked by Head Banker

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of the Canadian Bankers' Association criticized film makers Thursday for portraying bank robbers as romantic characters.

Gordon Bell told the 73rd annual convention of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police that movies such as The Gang that Couldn't Shoot Straight or Bonnie and Clyde portray bank robbers as "pathetic, bumbling yet likeable types."

In fact, he said, "the realities of crime are starkly harsh and degrading. Violent crime is a traumatic, life-threatening experience to our customers, staff and general public."

The increase in bank robberies in recent years has been "staggering," said Bell, chief general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

He also criticized the courts for giving what he called light sentences to bank robbers. Bell told the policemen he was "well aware of the challenges and frustrations you encounter on a daily basis, particularly when successful apprehension of the criminal is capped by serving a sentence scarcely reflective of the seriousness of the crime."

It is time to "stop heckling, shackling, demeaning, demoralizing our own forces of law and order," Bell said. "They must be able to gather intelligence, to know what's going on, to know who's doing or planning what in both the criminal underworld and the murkier netherworld of fanatics."

Canadians must remember that the purpose of the law is to protect society as a whole, not just the deviant element, Bell said.

Unwarranted Interference

So Education Minister Pat McGeer is going to impose his own version of justice on the public school system by rescinding the teaching licence of any teacher caught smoking marijuana. It appears it does not matter in McGeer's mind how the courts handle the cases of marijuana-smoking teachers; his and the cabinet's version of justice will overrule that imposed by our judicial system.

What has prompted McGeer's statement is a couple of recent cases on the Lower Mainland in which the courts have granted schoolteachers charged with possession of marijuana conditional discharges. These are specifically not to be considered convictions so that school boards cannot fire these teachers on the usual grounds that they have been convicted of a criminal offence.

McGeer, however, has decided he will try to find a way around this problem by using another section of the Public Schools Act — the one that empowers the cabinet to rescind a teacher's licence for "cause."

Two serious problems arise with this approach, however. The first is that McGeer is endeavoring to substitute his version of justice, morality, the law, for that of the courts.

Conditional discharges are granted by the courts only after they have heard the full circumstances of each case, both the details of the offence itself and the background of the accused. They are normally given out with great discretion by judges, awarded only in cases where the judge is convinced that a standard conviction is not warranted and would cause more hardship than the offence merited.

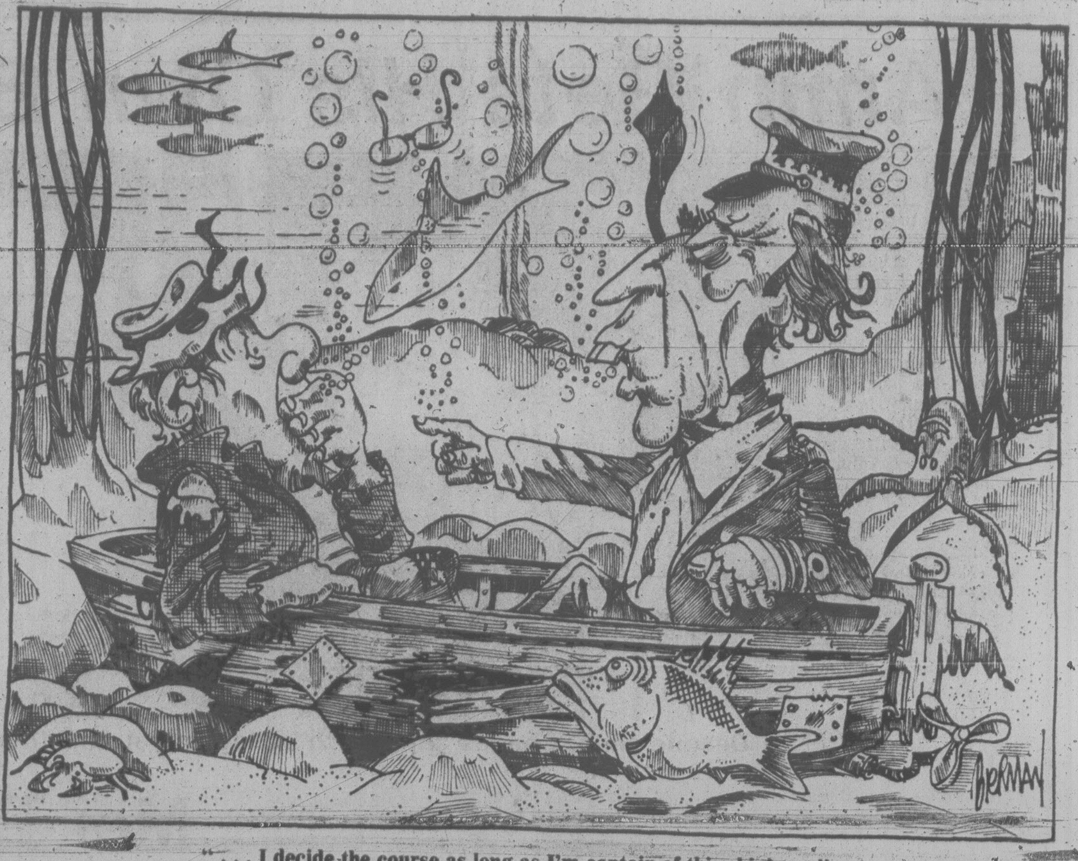
It is, therefore, all the more ironic that McGeer is trying to impose on the teachers a penalty — loss of livelihood for an indeterminate period of time — far more severe than that normally imposed by any court on persons convicted of marijuana possession. It is even worse that he is trying to do this on a blanket basis without considering individual circumstances.

The other problem created is one of basic unfairness. The minister seems to have singled out the offence of marijuana possession as one which demands a severe penalty; on what grounds is not clear.

Surely it is not McGeer's role to set up categories of morality among criminal offences. If he believes that all teachers convicted of criminal offences — or given discharges after being accused — should be suspended from teaching, that would be fair enough. But he then would have to take similar action against all teachers accused, for example, of drinking-driving offences.

Apparently in McGeer's eyes, drunken driving is not such a serious offence as marijuana possession. But in the eyes of many other members of the public, it is a more serious one. As we have said before, drunk drivers have killed a lot more British Columbians than have pot-smokers.

None of this should be construed to condone marijuana smoking, among teachers or any other group. It is illegal and should be dealt with as such. But it should be dealt with by the judicial process of our country, carefully set up to handle this sort of matter, not by unwarranted interference from the minister of education.



". . . I decide the course as long as I'm captain of this ship! . . ."

Shall We Boycott the Games?

Should western nations boycott the Olympic Games in 1980, scheduled for Moscow, because of Russia's intransigent stand on human rights for dissidents?

The question continues to be debated in the weeks following the harsh treatment of Russians Anatoly Scharansky and Alexandr Ginzburg in Soviet courts for so-called treasonous activities.

Comparisons have been drawn between the coming Moscow games and the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, which Hitler used to showcase the splendors and strengths of Nazism. (But Hitler learned to his chagrin that there's no predicting what some superb but unknown athlete — like black American Jesse Owens — can do to embarrass all the fine theories of racial superiority.)

There is no doubt that the USSR is going to wring every ounce of potential international PR out of it, with NBC paying some $180 million for the privilege of beaming it all to the world.

Such carefully-staged, highly-controlled events are tailor-made for the Soviet Union. It will control the venues for the various sports, and will ensure that dissidents and possible troublemakers are shipped out of town for the two weeks of the games. The Olympics in August two years from now will certainly brighten up the reputation of the Soviet Union in the west, tarnished rather badly since the election of President Jimmy Carter brought a new emphasis upon human rights in the world.

Should the U.S. boycott the Olympics because the USSR does not allow free speech, because it punishes severely any deviationist critics of the regime? Should we?

Feelings run high in some countries on this issue. British public opinion, ever attuned to the underdog, was outraged at the recent Soviet trials of dissidents, and many suggested an Olympic boycott. The Daily Mail, for example, stated that for Russia sport is just a continuation of policy, "like war for Von Clausewitz."

Purists may still believe that sports and politics should be kept separate, but even in the west they are bound up together. Gatherings of the world's strong and fleet are always contests between nations, not individuals, and in countries which do poorly — like Canada in the Montreal games — the politicians often get the blame.

African nations which boycotted the recent Commonwealth Games and the 1976 Olympics because of South Africa's politics were criticized and ridiculed; would we not be guilty of hypocrisy if now we decided a boycott of the games in Russia was noble and worthy?

A boycott by western nations in 1980 probably would wreck the Olympic Games for good; they are suffering severe financial pains even now.

World peace and international co-operation would be damaged, not helped, by a boycott which embarrassed the second most powerful nation on the globe.

RICHARD GWYN

PM's Politics of Cynicism

OTTAWA — This year, every $25,000-a-year, two-child, family in Canada will receive $974.75 worth of family allowances and often tax exemptions for children. Each, two-child, $7,000-a-year family will receive just $616.32 worth. Those who have, get more, and those who haven't, get less.

Next year, a small part of the just society will, at long last, be realized. The bonus to $25,000-a-year families will drop to $759.01, while that to $7,000-a-year families will increase to $916.43. Those who have still will get more than they need, but those who haven't will get, more or less, what they ought to.

The election eve decision to reform the family allowance child tax benefit program, announced by Finance Minister Jean Chretien but which Welfare Minister Monique Begin sold to cabinet over the objections of the finance department, was at one and the same time blatantly opportunist in its purpose and strikingly imaginative in its substance.

Brilliant Scheme

Political motives aside, the scheme in its own terms is brilliant. The device of refundable tax credits (which will be left in the hands of those who need the money but be taxed back from those with high incomes) is the essential, first, building-block of a "negative income tax" scheme. Ultimately, the device could be used to do away with our extravagant "universal" social security programs without having to force everyone through the humiliating, needle's eye of a means test.

The cabinet lacked the courage to go as far as it should have. A study published early this year by the National Council on Welfare showed that almost all our present social security programs — unemployment insurance and the Canada pension plan, as well as family allowances — give more to the rich than to the poor. The reason is tax deductibility, which increase in value as your income increases. Another study, by the Economic Council of Canada, showed that one-quarter of all unemployment insurance payments go to families with average incomes of close to $30,000.

The cabinet did debate doing away completely with the universal family allowance program, and then grasped only a small part of the nettle. The "hawks" lost, both because family allowance payments, even though now reduced to $20 a month, may be as close as many middle and upper-middle-income wives get to the self-esteem of financial independence, and, even more so, because the moment is close when these wives will get to vote.

Pre-electoral courage is rare. Pre-electoral imagination is rare enough for the cabinet still to deserve a round of applause. The government in effect has done an end run around all those Canadians hostile to government spending, and most particularly so to social security spending. Without increasing its total spending — a point that Chretien managed to mangle into incomprehensibility at his press conference — the government has found a way to redirect social security spending in the direction that it ought, long ago, to have gone.

MONIQUE BEGIN
. . . good move, she says

Now comes the hard point. When you go into the ballot box, do you mark an "X" against the government for cynicism, or for it for imagination?

In neat counterpoint, the pro and con arguments were put one after each other at press conferences last Friday by Begin and by New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent.

Broadbent was in fine form. He immediately declared that he supported the new program. His political rear thus protected, Broadbent went over to the attack. He accused the government of "moral bankruptcy" and of conducting a "political striptease" by making a series of announcements all of which ought to have been made either in Parliament or in the middle of an election campaign.

Begin was in pretty good form herself, as she had every right to be after a year as a solitary, and unheeded, propagandist for social security reform. "Good politics is good politics, and I'm not ashamed of it," said Begin. "All that matters is whether Canadians get what they want, and should have."

It's the old conundrum of how to respond to the right need done for the wrong reasons.

Stale and Tired

Here I chicken out, if only because I strongly suspect most Canadians have long ago made up their political minds and won't be influenced either way by all the ruffles and flourishes issuing out of Ottawa these days.

A couple of observations, though, cast out from a safe, neutral distance. The announcement does demonstrate that Prime Minister Trudeau, still is capable of being bold and innovative, despite a decade in office and a tired, stale, cabinet. Equally, the announcement demonstrates the extent to which Trudeau has abandoned the politics of reason for the politics of cynicism.

About the role of cynicism in politics, the record is mixed. Among British prime ministers of the last century or so, the most cynical, unquestionably, was Benjamin Disraeli. Wartime leaders like Winston Churchill aside, Disraeli was, almost certainly, the best. Among U.S. presidents, the most cynical, unquestionably, was Richard Nixon. He was, quite certainly, the worst. It's up to you to cast Trudeau where you will in the Canadian prime ministerial pantheon.

Shifty Trudeau

The shifty footwork of Trudeau & Co. is sickening. It is nothing other than a deceptive sham designed to beguile and bribe the witless and unwary, and a tactical feint to lure the stupid into returning him to office so that he can proceed with his French republique dictatorship.

The writer who said that anyone wearing the Liberal label is either a fool because he can't see what is happening, or a knave because he can and is going right along with the planned destruction of the country, hits it right on the button! — F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

May-Ling Kwok

With reference to your article about Canada Council grants, I would like to point out that May-Ling Kwok, who won a major award, besides being a former student at the Victoria Conservatory of Music, was also a graduate of the University of Victoria in piano performance. Thanks to the affiliation of the two institutions, I think both may take pride in Miss Kwok's extraordinary musicianship. She is at present in the doctoral program at Indiana University. — Robin Wood, Principal, Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Good News, But

The announcement of an extra $20 on the guaranteed income supplement is good news, albeit inadequate, for those receiving same.

The people who are marginal and have just saved enough money to give them approximately the same income as those on the supplement, seem to be the unfortunate and forgotten. Because they have saved for an income of $150 to $250 a month they get no consideration and are still forced to live at the absolute poverty level partly on their own resources.

These people are living on between $6,000 and $10,000 a year which is, of course quite inadequate with today's inflation.

It would seem that either the supplement should be paid to all with less than $10,000 a year or that the whole OAP scheme be reorganized to pay a really adequate income to these people and cut the $20,000 a year and over bracket off altogether.

Pensioners cannot live even in moderate decency while paying the same charges as the high income working people. It is a pity that so physically rich a country cannot give the elderly a carefree life. Those who saved find their savings useless today and must eke out a rather miserable existence. — P. Simpson, 2536 Forbes Street.

Who's Someone?

Mr. Paul Nanton's letter that appeared in the Times Aug. 25 (Unchanging Values) can hardly enhance the cause of the monarchy, if it must depend on such a mixture of confused logic and sentiment.

He attributes to the prime minister a quote supposedly made two years ago at an undisclosed place, time and occasion. I would doubt if its accuracy can be checked. He cites a "recent writer" in Le Devoir, not named and in an undisclosed edition. He seems to intimate, yet doesn't say, that he possesses a linguistic capability that can accurately interpret articles in Le Devoir and speeches made in Quebec.

Of course, all of the foregoing might be accurate and I suppose we should accept his motives for what they appear to be. However, the final reference in his letter to a quote defined as "someone in Saskatchewan" casts some doubt as to the accuracy of all of Mr. Nanton's quotes. How unspecific can one get?

Many may support the monarchy, but I don't think that Mr. Nanton's letter does much good except to further polarize fringe opinions. To make such statements in his letter as I have mentioned is a dangerous game unless it can be backed by irrefutable facts. — A. Lee, 235 Sunny Lane.

New York in 1890s. Ours not quite so bad, but poles need to be moved.

Put 'Em Under

I support Ald. Bill McElroy about the power poles which are dangerous and ugly. My wife and I often ride to Sears, and from Fernwood along Haultain and Shelbourne it's bad for the bus driver with a load of passengers. How he misses those poles is a miracle! Nearly every one has been gouged. At Fernwood and Bay the pole is in the road where the bus stops. Put the wires underground, make work for the young fellows who want to work. They are all underground in Britain, where they should be. I have been a transport man all my life. It sometimes puts the wind up me now I'm not behind the wheel. — A. G. Steen, Fort Street.

Arrogance Control

Proposition 13, which cut property taxes in California by 57 per cent, was a tax reducing measure masterminded by Howard Jarvis. I believe it was a referendum approved by 70 per cent of the voters. In the Bill of Rights, Article I, of the United States Constitution "The right of the people to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievance" is granted. I don't believe we have that right in Canada.

Referendum and initiative are two words that are well known in one of the most democratic nations and certainly one of the healthiest and strongest economies in the world. I refer, of course, to Switzerland which is a confederaton of 22 sovereign cantons (states) with two federal legislative bodies. Within 90 days of the passing of a bill by the federal assembly the Swiss people have the right under the constitution to have a referendum if they so wish. The petition has to have at least 30,000 signatures. As Canada has over three times the Swiss population, it would take over 100,000 signatures in Canada. Switzerland has proved that this system works. It is the furthest development of democracy yet attained.

Here is one example where the right of referendum would have worked in Canada:

In 1970 a group of prominent Canadians sponsored the Committee for an Independent Canada. It was strictly a non- partisan group and its purpose was to inform Canadians of the extent of foreign control of our economy. The group included Peter Newman, editor; Walter Gordon, former Liberal cabinet minister; publishers Jack McClelland and Mel Hurtig; Flora MacDonald, Conservative MP; Claude Ryan, editor; and many other prominent Canadians.

In June, 1971 a large group of the committee went to Ottawa and presented a petition, signed by 170,000 Canadians, urging that action be taken to regain control of the Canadian economy. Mr. Trudeau agreed with them and said that the government was coming up with a strong policy soon. Nothing was done for a year and the creation of the Foreign Investment Review Agency was announced. However, in a few months it was announced that the prime minister no longer thought it was important to control foreign investment. I am sure that if a petition with 170,000 signatures was handed to the Swiss government something would have been done about it.

What a shame nothing was done in 1971! Mel Hurtig wrote in 1971 that the yearly interest and dividend payments to foreigners were $1.5 billion. Well, it was nearly three times that in 1977.

In the referendum and initiative, the former is used if the people want to alter or amend a bill passed by the federal assembly, whereas the initiative is used when the people desire to amend or revise the federal constitution. It takes two-fifths more signatures than in the referendum to do this. It also requires a majority of the cantons or states.

Many times in Canada, a government with an ordinary majority does not represent 50 per cent of the voting public. So often those opposing the government feel frustrated. The initiative could keep a government from getting too arrogant. — G. R. Hunter, Summerland, B.C.

Garbage Chutes

Landlords are shutting off tenants' use of garbage chutes in their buildings, using two excuses to justify the action.

☐ One is that they have been ordered by fire safety authorities to install sprinkler systems in the chutes. As the cost of this is not likely to exceed $350, that excuse is paltry.

☐ The other excuse does not apply in the districts of Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt, but does to some extent in Victoria, which is ordering some landlords to stop burning garbage because they are polluting the air. That order does not stop the use of chutes, for there is no regulation preventing the landlord clearing them out and putting the garbage from them into cans for disposal.

That refutes the landlord's excuses. So what then is the real reason the chutes are being closed? I maintain that it is because of the small cost for installation of fire safety equipment and the labor required to empty the chute bins.

Tenants now must pack their kitchen garbage down flights of stairs and outside to garbage cans, which is most definitely a reduction in service, equalling a hidden rent raise.

Therefore, the rentalsman and the rent review commission should order the landlords to restore the service or make an immediate rent reduction of at least $20 per month. — D. Frankham, President, Capital Region Tenants Association.

Tractors, combines and electrical power . . .

Farm Technology Kills Caste System

THE ECONOMIST

Can the Hindu caste system, which has always held India's 576,000 villages together, survive the coming of modern farming? Evidently not, if one looks to the prospering Punjab, where the familiar trinity of tractors, combines and electric power is rapidly displacing human labor. Strip away the age-old economic basis for caste — the exchange of labor and services for grain and fodder — and the old sahib-serf relationship shatters like overripe wheat.

At least it does for the untouchables, whom Mahatma Gandhi called harijans, the children of God. Long the true tillers of the soil in rural Punjab, doing much of the actual field work under landowning Jat overlords, the harijans got a rude shock in 1967 when new Mexican-bred dwarf wheat suddenly made many Jats rich. In a fast shift from subsistence agriculture to modern commercial farming, incomes soared and a struggle began to see who got what. The harijans lost out and millions deserted the fields for jobs in nearby, newly prosperous towns.

The Jats still don't know what hit them. Many evidently confused the old subservience and respect with their own inherent superiority (since they are generally, but not always, taller and fairer, there is a racial element too). For a time they plugged the labor gap with seasonal migrants from the poorest areas of Uttar Pradesh and Bihar, an alien, often pathetic lot, with a different language and culture. Now, as India's agricultural revolution moves down the Ganges towards Calcutta, even this labor source is drying up.

One solution is more mechanization. But this makes farms of less than 10-12 acres uneconomical. The number of poorer Jats going bankrupt is growing; so is the number of alcoholics and opium-eaters. Inevitably the biggest landowners are evading legal 18-acre-per-family ceilings to amass more land. This Punjab phenomenon is the sort of thing that can be expected to happen in large areas of India where modern farm science takes hold and labor, land and rent come to be treated as commercially negotiable property.

Take the story of one Punjabi village, Ghungrali, 180 miles north of Delhi in the green revolution's heartland. The village is inhabited by 1,644 people, one third Jats, who own 65 farms, and two thirds harijans, who used to cultivate the land. The revolution began with Ghungrali's first tube-well in 1953. The first fertilizer was used in 1960, the first tractor in 1962, the first test plot of Mexican-bred dwarf wheat in 1965. Two years later this high-yielding variety was sown on all 1,370 acres of the village's wheatland. Ghungrali has never looked back.

The biggest changes have come in the past two or three years. Now there are 107 tube-wells, mostly powered by electricity, which blankets the Punjab, 40 tractors, two villager-owned Dutch combines and giant East German ones hired out by state agencies. Consumption of chemical fertilizer has grown from nothing to 800 tons a year and biogas plants to supply both cooking fuel and fertilizer are being installed as fast as people can afford them (cost: $150). Underground piped irrigation (to avoid evaporation) is catching on.

It might have all peaked out two years ago, when a hailstorm destroyed the wheat harvest. The Jats hastened to plant rice for the first time and made twice the cash profit they had ever made on wheat. This year triple-cropping is being introduced, a wheat-pulse-rice rotation made possible by a new 60-day miracle pulse, moong, which fixes nitrogen from the air into the soil and cuts down the need for fertilizing the next crop by two thirds.

Almost all the Jats are in debt — on average $5,000-$10,000, up from $1,000-$2,000 in 1970. Yet with a medium-sized holding of 15 acres (land, house, machinery and all), a Jat family's assets come to $50,000-$60,000 at Indian prices. The costs of inputs are rising, and the Jats talk much of demanding "parity"; but the price they are getting — 112½ rupees per 100 kilos of wheat — is already higher than the equivalent American price.

The harijans have been reduced to a rural proletariat and they like it. Fully 80 per cent of the men from Ghungrali's 160 harijan families now commute by bicycle to nearby towns to work in mills or factories (making 10-12 rupees a day compared with 5, plus meals, for field work). Most harijans took leave during the April-May harvest when the Jats, unable to hire enough combines or migrant workers, were forced for the first time to offer their fields on contract; the harijans, by putting wives and children to work, earned more than ever before.

For anyone who had seen past harvests, when large groups of Jats and harijans cut side by side, joking and often competing to see who cut the faster, the spectacle of small harijan families mowing while most Jats sat idle at their wells was sad to see. The former interdependence is almost gone and with it Ghumgrali's old sense of community.

Few seem to mind. The richest Jats talk of the need for 100-acre farms to "really mechanize and solve the labor problem". Only the poorer Jats, deeply in debt, speak nostalgically of former times when "everybody worked together like a family" and "there was unity."

To the harijans their emancipation means "going out and working and talking freely", and "not having these Jats rule over us; they can no longer treat us like animals". A few have regrets: "If the Jats paid more generously we would not go outside to work. They are too greedy". But very few. Instead old resentments are now openly voiced: "Indira Gandhi was good to us. Once she sent money to us but the Jats objected". (Mrs. Gandhi, whose party secretary, Buta Singh, is a harijan Sikh, remains a heroine to low-caste Punjabis, who, unlike the poor in other northern states, were never subjected to forced sterilization.)

The new harijan credo of "now we are free" and "my sons will never work for the Jats" has swept village Punjab, where India's old Upstairs, Downstairs, sahib-and-slavery days seem gone for good. Atrocities against harijans by higher castes, who do not seem to want to grasp the economic reasons for what is happening, get reported in the Indian press almost every day. Having proved incompatible, the ancient Hindu caste system and India's unstoppable agricultural revolution are on a collision course. It could decide India's politics for a long time to come.

New Ruins for Old Ruins?

By STEPHEN DOWNER
The Times of London

MEXICO CITY—A controversy is developing in Mexico City between archeologists who are trying to excavate the ruins of an Aztec temple and anthropologists who want to save Spanish colonial architecture above it.

The ruins of the Great Temple of the Aztecs lie beneath the narrow, traffic-clogged streets of the city centre, under buildings constructed by the Spaniards who conquered Mexico in 1521.

The Spanish expedition leader Hernan Cortes is reported to have smashed the religious monument and many others and used the idols and rock to build Mexico City 7,350 feet above sea level.

Before the Spaniards arrived, the temple had stood majestically in Tenochtitlan — the lake-ringed capital of the Aztec empire — behind where the Metropolitan Cathedral now towers. The Aztecs dominated large areas of Mexico for about 200 years and founded Tenochtitlan in 1325.

As long as 200 years ago, when Mexico was still under Spanish rule, various temple excavation and restoration projects were begun. But it was not until digging workmen uncovered what archeologists subsequently identifed as a rock carving of the Aztec Moon Goddess Coualxauhqui in the city centre Calle Guatemala last February that the latest hunt began.

Gaston Garcia Cantu, director of the National Anthropological and History Institute, said the 20-ton carving was of "incalculable historical value," and the government of President Jose Lopez Portillo ordered excavating to start. The aim was to unearth the temple and establish an open-air museum at the site.

However, anthropologists working for the same institute as Garcia Cantu have said in a published document that there is "no point in making new ruins to find old ruins."

"The archeologists have indicated that, apart from what has been found near Coyolxauhqui, everything has been removed," the document says. "This proves the veracity of (Spanish) conquest chronicles that refer to the destruction of the city of Tenochtitlan, temple by temple, stone by stone, to construct the colonial city."

The document is signed by Jose Antonio Rojas, one of nine members of the INAH urban history research team. He said in an interview that over the next two weeks he would be trying to get an explanation from the archeologists on how far they plan to take the unearthing project, which has been continuing on vacant lots.

Although Efrain Castro, the INAH director of historic monuments, has insisted that not one building of historic value would be demolished, Rojas and his colleagues are worried because the government has said that up to one and a half square miles of the city centre might be affected.

This part of the capital is inhabited by thousands of low-income Mexicans who occupy flats with frozen rents or operate hundreds of hole-in-the-wall businesses. All could be rendered homeless of jobless, says Rojas, who has personally catalogued about 3,000 buildings in this quarter over the past 18 months and taken about 6,000 photographs in the process.

Pedestrians there push past blind peddlers and beggars. Sometimes they stumble over babies asleep in cardboard boxes or bump into sandal-shod Indians, in from the provinces looking for increasingly scarce work. They might be engulfed by clouds of diesel fumes from noisy buses inching their way along congested streets.

Yugoslavia's New Elite

By PETER RISTIC

BELGRADE — Perched on mountains, strung across valleys and poised above the Adriatic, they stand in their tens of thousands — the garish mansions of Yugoslav "guest workers" who have struck it rich in Western Europe.

More than a million Yugoslavs have left their job-hungry country in search of work since the so-called economic reforms of more than a decade ago. They man the production lines of France and Germany fired with one common ambition — to return home with money in their pockets to live in style.

Some have already made it but most are still sending home their deutschemarks and francs to complete their half-finished edifices.

The homes — many incorporating gigantic family tombs — would look less out of place in the brashness of Texas than in their poor rustic surroundings.

The authorities are clearly pained not by the owner's lack of taste but by the thought that the money could be put to better use.

The sums involved are gigantic. Last year the 700,000 guest workers sent home $2 billion, a good deal of which went towards fitting out those mansions. They are believed to have another $7 billion salted away in Western banks, enough to pay off most of Yugoslavia's estimated $9 billion foreign debts.

Now Yugoslavia has found a way of siphoning off some of the money and luring the guest workers home — by offering them a chance to "buy" jobs for themselves in Yugoslavia.

Basically, the guest worker will lend the government money to build factories. Each loan must be enough to provide at least one unit of employment and will attract 7½ per cent interest.

In fact, several factories already have been built in this way. The most celebrated example is in a poor town in the republic of Croatia. The Imotski town authorities have built three textile factories with the help of the money from their intensely patriotic workers abroad. They borrowed sophisticated Western promotional techniques to sell the idea, including a film that was shown at migrant clubs across Western Europe.

The catch is that the job offer does not come until several years after the loan — and the job is not guaranteed.

Migrant workers who lend money would never get a job to which another Yugoslav was better entitled, one official said.

"The social situation of a person — that is, how many children he has and so on — will remain the most important deciding factor when applying." The loan would count only when applicants were identical in other respects.

But that claim is to some extent official window-dressing. The authorities do not want to give the impression that they are creating a new class of privileged worker in a country where unemployment is running at eight per cent.

The fact is that Yugoslavia needs the money, and anything is better than those mansions.

The Upper House of Wax

katharine whitehorn

LONDON — In London today there is concern about Madame Tussaud's, the most famous waxworks in the world. Are the wax people really as lifelike, people are asking, as they used to be? Or is it that we now see so much more of famous people, what with TV and film coverage, that we are more critical of their wax likenesses?

At the same time there is much discussion on the future of the House of Lords. Half the Labour Members of Parliament think it ought to be abolished (the other half want to end up there). Even the Conservatives think it should be made a bit more democratic or up-to-date — if only they could think how to get such reforms past the antique relics who are wheeled up from the country whenever any such change is suggested.

I have just hit on a magical idea which will solve the problem of both these ancient institutions at a stroke.

Why not combine the two?

It would have everything to recommend it. The noble traditions on which our tourist industry so heavily depends would be strengthened in every way. Americans could approach closely to a real live Lord, which as good republicans they are always passionately anxious to do. Madame Tussaud's would be let off the chore of making wax models of people who in any case look as if they had died in their seat.

The man who changes the newspaper in the hands of the fake visitor every day at Madame Tussaud's could do the same for Lords, thus keeping them up to date with the news. The more venerable gentlemen would not be bothered by the snores or the conversation of their fellows, because they could be planted among the real people. And those Life Waxworks who are under the instructions of the parties would simply be lifted up by brawny doormen and placed in the right division lobby for a vote.

If it was thought that Jack the Ripper or Marilyn Monroe were not quite the stuff of which great debates are made, then it could be argued for them, as it often is for hereditary peers, that they represent a cross-section of real humanity, with no arbitrary selection process coming between them and their chances of being a random sample.

Another point often made in favor of hereditary peers is that, since some of them are apt to shoot others of them in mistake for grouse or deer, their eldest sons sometimes land up in the Lords when they are encouragingly young. This way you could keep the age down by simply running up the odd waxwork of Minou Drouet, Donny Osmond or Princess Anne's baby — and melting down the odd bishop into the bargain.

The waxworks are getting less and less static these days, playing as Time Goes By with Bogart and imitating the rumble of the guns and the smell of the powder on Nelson's gun-deck. Maybe the same is true of the Lords — who actually have stopped one or two horrendous pieces of legislation from hurtling through.

But in these hard times it is surely in everyone's interest that we should adopt economies of scale, and that all those engaged in breathing life into the apparently dead should work in harmony together.

Provincial Bank

The Provincial Bank of Canada reports after-tax balance of revenue of $13.2 million for the nine months ended July 31, compared with $10.2 million for the corresponding period last year.

Assets were $4.7 billion on July 31, up from $4 billion a year earlier.

Third-quarter after-tax balance of revenue was $4.9 million, or $1.65 a share, up from $3.08 million, or $1.34 a share, from the corresponding period in 1977.

A bank statement said third-quarter figures took into account the increase in the average number of shares outstanding since a recent share issue, which ended May 23.

The issue increased the bank's equity capital by $18 million and brought the number of shares outstanding to 9,071,068 on July 31.

Silverwood Ind.

Silverwood Industries Ltd. reports a net profit of $602,162 or 44.8 cents a share for the three months ended June 18, compared with $1.75 million or about $1.31 a share for the similar period last year. Profit for the period last year included an extraordinary item of $1.52 million. Consolidated sales of $130.01 million reflect a $16.52-million increase over 1977.

United Canso

United Canso Oil Gas Ltd. reported a net loss of $204,805, or three cents a share, for the fiscal third quarter ended June 30.

In a news release, the company said this was due mainly to write-offs for dry hole costs and abandonments and to adverse foreign exchange rates.

Canso said it had net earnings of $565,178, equal to nine cents a share, for the same period last year. Revenues at $2,534,810 for the 1978 quarter advanced 14 per cent from the $2,226,431 posted for the year-earlier period.

Canso president John W. Buckley said the firm attained record revenues from operations of $7,795,630 for the 1978 fiscal nine months. Net income for the period totalled $1,192,598, or 20 cents a share.

For the comparable 1977 period, the company had gross revenues of $7,016,633, on which it sustained a net loss. Buckley said this was due mainly to write-offs, of unproductive exploratory wells drilled offshore South Africa and Haiti, of $944,904 or 16 cents a share.

Buckley said oil and gas sales and royalties for the 1978 fiscal third quarter at $1,718,781 had risen 16 per cent from the prior year period, while sales and royalties for the 1978 fiscal nine months at $5,430,702 had increased 18 per cent from the same period in 1977.

Cash and equivalents and marketable securities totalled $39,499,745 June 30, compared with $44,143,232 a year earlier, the reduction reflecting liquidation of short-term investments and their reinvestment in operating assets.

Stockholders' equity at June 30 totalled $63,188,411, equal to $10.64 a share, compared with $61,628,534, or $10.41 a share, a year earlier, Buckley said.

TD Bank Electrohome

Electrohome Ltd. cut its losses in the first months of this year but still came up with a $711,000 deficit for the period.

The company in a letter to shareholders reported a loss which came to 25 cents a share compared with a deficit of $2,114,000 or 72 cents a share for the first half of 1977.

Electrohome reported higher sales in every division except its furniture operations. It has plans to introduce new products into the market including smoke detectors, electric motors and plastic components for industry.

James Holmes, chairman and chief executive officer, said the outlook for the remainder of the year is for continuing improvement.

Hollinger

Hollinger Mines Ltd. had a loss of $627,000 or 13 cents a share for the first six months of 1978 compared to net earnings of $7,701,000 or $1.57 a share in the same period of 1977, A. L. Fairley, Jr., company president, said.

He said the lose resulted from a strike at Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd. which began March 9. But has since been settled.

Hollinger's results are consolidated with those of its subsidiaries, Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd. and Hollinger North Shore Exploration Co. Ltd.

In the first six months of 1978 interest and dividend income were comparable to 1977 but royalty income dropped from $14,332,000 in 1977 to $5,647,000 in the 1978 period.

Hollinger's share of loss incurred by Iron Ore Co., in which Hollinger has an equity interest, was $5,229,000.

Fairley said company earnings are traditionally higher in the second half of the year than in the first.

"This is anticipated in 1978," Fairley said, "But it will not be possible to restore production and earnings lost as a result of the strike and, as a consequence, it is expected that Hollinger earnings for the 12 months will be substantially below those of last year."

Farley said the strike at Iron Ore Co. resulted in a sharp decline of first half earnings by Labrador Mining and Exploration.

Earnings for the 1978 period amounted to $1,911,000 or 58 cents a share compared to $7,437,000 or $2.25 a share in the same period a year earlier.

Revenue from dividends and interest were comparable to the equivalent period of 1977 but royalty income, a major source of Labrador revenue, was down sharply.

The company's share of loss in Iron Ore Co., in which Labrador Mining has an equity interest, amounted to $1,658,000.

Canfor Invest.

Canfor Investments Ltd. has reported net earnings for the six months ended June 30 of $4.4 million or $4.22 a share, compared with $6.2 million or $5.99 a share for the same period last year.

Company president Peter Bentley said in a news release the decline in earnings was due to the company's pulp and paper holdings, which have suffered from poor market conditions.

Canfor Investments has forest industry holdings, a majority interest in Yorkshire Trust and a 48.5 per cent interest in the recently amalgamated Versatile Cornat Corp.

Rent-a-Pickup Budgets Do the Trick

SAINT JOHN, N.B. — Defending champion Victoria Budgets, with standout performances from both pickups, came from behind to edge Nova Scotia 5-4 in an extra inning Thursday and remain unbeaten in preliminary play at the Canadian senior men's fastball championship.

Budgets, now 3-0, maintained their lead in the six-team Blue Division with the help of Clem Perini of Vancouver Thirsk 79ers and Rudy Teichrob of Abbotsford Remple Brothers.

Perini came up with a masterful relief-pitching performance and Teichrob smashed a pinch-hit single in the eight inning to drive in the winning run.

Budgets were scheduled to play Fredericton today in the final of four preliminary games.

After blanking their first two opponents in the tournament by 5-0 scores, Victoria got off to a shaky start aganst Nova Scotia.

Starting-pitcher Stan Kern was called for an illegal pitch on his first throw and was never effective for the rest of the inning and a half he toiled on the mound.

The first Nova Scotia batter drew a walk, stole second and scored on an error by shortstop Bob Holness. The score jumped to 2-0 on a pair of singles before Kern was able to get the side out.

Budgets got one back in their half of the inning as leadoff batter Dave Williams drew a walk. Carl Walker sacrificed and Bob Burrows and Holness drew walks from Nova Scotia starter Johnny Rogers.

Kern gave up a leadoff single in the second inning before being replaced by Andy Konopacki, who got two out before allowing a walk and a single that put Nova Scotia ahead 3-1.

Burrows got one back for Victoria with a bases-empty home run in the third but Nova Scotia regained the margin with a run in the fourth on an error by Holness, a walk and a single by Rogers.

Budgets-coach Harvey Stevenson turned to Perini, who had pitched a one-hit shutout over Newfoundland on Wednesday.

Perini held Nova Scotia to one hit the rest of the way.

Victoria proceeded to close the gap with a run in the fourth when Dennis Eckert hit a single, advanced on a sacrifice by John Green and scored on a two-out error.

In the sixth Green reached first on an error, moved up on a sacrifice by Pete Songhurst and scored the tying run on a single from Williams.

Green, who also hit a single during the game, scored the winning run on Teichrob's single in the eighth after belting a triple that just missed clearing the centre-field fence.

Winnipeg leads the seven-team Red Division with a 3-1 record after losing 1-0 to Saskatoon, Sask., and winning 2-0 over Newmarket, Ont., in play Thursday.

The host Saint John team, tied with Winnipeg for the lead in the Red Division after play Wednesday, suffered a 7-2 drubbing from Quebec City and slipped into a three-way tie for second with Quebec City and Newmarket, all with 2-1 records. Charlottetown was 2-2.

In the Blue Division, Fredericton was second with 2-1, followed by Halifax with 1-1, Fort McMurray, Alta., and Uranium City, Sask., which represents the Northwest Territories, both with 1-2, and St. John's, Nfld., with 1-3.

Trailing in the Red Division are Saskatoon with 1-2 win-loss record and the Yukon all-stars with four losses.

The top four teams in each division advance to the playoffs, where the top two teams are allowed two losses while the third and fourth place teams can lose only once before being eliminated.

Playoffs are scheduled to start tonight.

Used Russian Stars Up For Grabs By WHA

It has come to this: Russia may send its old hockey players to the World Hockey Association. O tempora! O Morenz!

The Soviet Ice Hockey Federation says it's ready to give its permission to players who might like to try their luck in the WHA. But not its stars. Not the kids coming up. Just the older players, the ones no longer able to help the national team.

And they couldn't come simply as players. It would have to be as playing coaches.

Is that rubbing it in, or what?

We go for years sending teams over there to show them how our national game should be played. We murder the bums. Only now we can't do it anymore. They know it and we know it. So when the WHA goes pleading for a player exchange they smile and say certainly — as long as you take our rejects. And WHA teams are lining up for the privilege.

Beautiful. Honest Ivan's Used Player Lot.

"What's that, sir? You'd like to look at something in an older-model forward? Sir, you have come to the right place. This is a 1978 Vladimir Shadrin — low mileage, original uniform, sound as a rouble. Go ahead, sir. Kick the shins. Take it out around the rink.

"The shoulder? Well, yes, the shoulder was hurt in 1976 in the world championships in Poland. But I assure you, sir, our body men have put it back good as new — make a muscle, Vladimir — and since then he's been owned by a little old lady's team that only played on Sundays at church picnics.

"Ah, sir, you drive a hard bargain. But you look like a kind sort, and we do want all our players to go to good homes. After all, they've given us the best years of their lives. So I'll tell you what I'll do. Throw in another $500 and you can have the set — Shadrin and this 1978 Alexander Yakushev.

"You will? Fine! I know you won't be disappointed. You want to take them now or wait til they're gift wrapped?"

As a psychological ploy, the sudden Russian trade agreement — their old players for our money — is marvellous. They're treating North American hockey like a Silver Threads retirement project. St. Petersburg-by-the-Rink.

"Look, Vladimir, you've worked hard. It's time you let the young folks take over. We're sending you to this wonderful resort. Sunshine, travel, a little hockey, not much skating. And who knows, before long you might have your very own groupie. So say goodbye to the grandchildren, and don't forget your skates and support stockings."

But there's a chance they've miscalculated. Because if Russian players come here it is inevitable that Canadian players will go there, if only as a diplomatic courtesy. And while they're there they'll whisper all the forbidden words to the young, impressionable Russian stars:

"Psst: Hair dryer!"

"Agent!"

"Endorsements!"

"Broads!"

"No-cut!"

"Judge Houston!"

In a year they'll all be infected. Russian hockey will crumble. Two years and it'll be no better than ours. We'll play every bit as well as they do. And the Chinese will win the world tournament.

I tell you, it's mortifying.

The standing joke about Vancouver Canucks is if they can sign six more Swedes we'll win our national game.

Los Angeles Kings, looking for a goalkeeper to replace Rogie Vachon, scour the country and come up with a guy named Vladimir Dzurilla who is fat, 35, and lives in Czechoslovakia. And the reason they've got a shot is that the Czech Ice Hockey Federation says he doesn't figure in their national team plans anymore.

"Give us your tired, your poor, your huddled masses . . ."

You have to admire the Soviets, though. First they dangle the line by grudgingly agreeing to let us have a few of their hockey players for a couple of seasons. Then they add that they'll only send the ones who aren't good enough for their national team. And after we've bitten they set the hook by saying that, naturally, these players who aren't good enough for their top team could never come over here simply as players. They'd have to come as playing coaches.

In other words, they'll let their second-stringers teach us how to play our game. Are you listening up there, Lester Patrick?

The frightening thing is that in some ways they could do just that. There is no doubt that the Russian approach to the game is far more scientific than the North American, or that some of our high-price help could learn a few things if they'd hold still for it.

But can you imagine a Soviet playing-coach on, say, the New York Rangers?

Shadrin (to interpreter): "Please to tell the No. 77, Mr. Esposito, that he is not getting the full power from his skating we will show him how to do it."

Esposito (to interpreter): "Please to tell this!$+£! that he can !+?£$ing well take his Russian power skating and stick it !$+?£!"

How long before the ICBMs come out of the silos?

Court Extends No-Strike Order

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal judge indefinitely extended a temporary restraining order Thursday against the Major League Umpires Association, preventing baseball's men in blue from walking out while their lawyers continue to deal with the legal rhubarb.

The dispute, which has been brewing since spring, was highlighted by a one-day strike Aug. 25. The disgruntled umpires walked out after the American and National Leagues refused to negotiate 21 new demands in an eight-page telegram sent Aug. 16 to both league offices.

District Court Judge Joseph McGlynn ordered both sides Thursday to submit briefs by Sept. 15. He had granted the temporary restraining order the same day the umpires walked out, but not in time to prevent the work stoppage.

College and retired professional umpires filled in at the 13 affected games and the regulars were back at work Saturday.

The umpires contend the current five-year contract between the association and the two leagues is not binding because it contains inaccuracies and does not cover all the mandatory subjects of collective bargaining.

Verbal agreement on the pact was reached March 1, 1977. Seven umpires testified Thursday that about a year passed before they received a written copy and that it was then that they discovered the errors.

"We started going over this thing at spring training this year, and we said, 'Hey, this isn't what we agreed to'," testified Jim Evans, an AL umpire since 1971. "And we realized we had an incompetent lawyer, and that a lot of things had slipped through."

The contract was signed by the association's former counsel, John Cifeli, and presidents Chub Feeney of the NL and Lee MacPhail of the AL.

The seven umpires, all members of the association's board of directors, testified they had not given Cifeli power of attorney, and that therefore the pact was null and void.

Koreans Flash Power

A touring high school all-star team from South Korea tripped Victoria Firefighters 18-6 in a rain-plagued exhibition baseball game before about 300 fans Thursday at Royal Athletic Park.

The visiting squad, which is scheduled to play Nanaimo today and Vancouver on Saturday, allowed three runs in the second inning but bounced back to take command with four in the fourth and eight in the seventh.

It was the South Korean team's fifth victory in seven starts on a North American tour.

Firefighters, the B.C. champions and third-place team in the recent Pacific Northwest championship, were held to three hits.

Hong-suk Choi led the Koreans with two doubles in the game, called after 6½ innings.

Park Deal Major Hurdle If Mussels to Return

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Victoria Mussels ended their Northwest League baseball season Thursday night by not playing at all.

And whether they play at all next season will hinge on a meeting between the team and city parks officials in the next two weeks.

Mussels and Northern Division champion Grays Harbor Loggers were rained out of their last game of the season at Athletic Park Thursday. It meant nothing in the standings, so Mussels were obliged to announce to a crowd of about 300 that rainchecks will be honored at the first game next year . . . if there is one.

Mussel owners Jim and Lynn Chapman and Don Rogelstad are determined there will be despite losses estimated at about $30,000. First, though, they must hammer out a deal for the use of the park.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, chairman of the parks and recreation committee, said Wednesday the city has spent $5,000 providing Mussels with a home park this year and is not prepared to continue subsidizing a professional operation with tax money.

Mussels, playing before crowds as low as 125, paid the city 17½ per cent of their gate receipts, which Blencoe said failed to cover cost of lights, ticket takers, ushers and concession workers.

Blencoe confronted the club owners in the Athletic Park press box during an exhibition game Thursday night between a touring team of high school all-stars from South Korea and Victoria Firefighters Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars. The Koreans won 18-6 and Blencoe was on hand to make presentations following the game, called after 6½ innings.

He was asked if the city will demand a guaranteed rental figure in place of the gate-receipt percentage?

"That's certainly a possibility," he replied. "It would have to be negotiated."

Rogelstad said the club would be willing to negotiate the lease, "but we're going to want a piece of the concessions."

Lynn Chapman, Mussels general manager, asked the alderman if concession profits were negotiable.

"It has been a traditional matter for the city to retain the concessions," Blencoe said. "We would have to sit down and review any change in that policy."

Blencoe was unable to provide concession revenue figures. He said the $5,000 loss figure was given to him by Jack Morgan, city recreation director, and included the concession figures.

"If they're not making $1.50 a head per night at the concession stand, then there's something wrong," Rogelstad said. "Based on our attendance for the first 24 home dates (10,684 including fans admitted on the free list) the city should have taken in more than $16,000 from concessions.

Sept. 10 was mentioned as a possible date on which the Chapmans and Rogelstad will meet with Blencoe and Morgan.

Rogelstad, meanwhile, said Mussels had created revenue in other areas of the city.

"We've also created an opportunity for kids in Victoria to see and even play professional baseball. Take Roy Moretti, for example."

Moretti, a Victoria product, was signed after a tryout by the Mussels and Thursday was scouted in a workout by Wayne Norton of Vancouver, director of amateur baseball in B.C. and a scout for Montreal Expos of the National League.

Victoria also has given pitcher Dale Mohorcic permission to report to Cincinnati where the Reds want to look him over with a view to buying his contract.

Mussels, meanwile, hope to obtain a working agreement with a major league club next year and Los Angeles Dodgers will be the first team they approach at the baseball winter meetings in Florida in December. The Dodgers sent the Mussels four players from their Lethbridge, Alta., farm club in the Pioneer League this season.

Green Light Given To LA

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Leaders of the International Olympic Committee gave a provisional nod Thursday to Los Angeles to go ahead with the 1984 Summer Olympics — painlessly and without any demands on the city taxpayers.

At the same time, they opened up the Olympic Games to commercial sponsorship.

"It may be a pattern for Olympic Games of the future," said IOC president Lord Killanin. "We have to realize that the Olympic Games, which we all hope will continue, must live with the times."

The nine-member IOC executive board unanimously approved a formula for two contracts to be signed, instead of the traditional one contract between the IOC and the host city.

Los Angeles will be asked to sign one contract with the IOC, pledging to organize the Games in accordance with IOC rules.

The USOC has said it will guarantee the Games against financial loss, with the help of federal funds and grants.

Greater Victoria Spots Boast Good Chinooks

Several spots around the Greater Victoria area offer good salmon fishing — mainly for chinooks — while waters north of Nanaimo are rated excellent for coho.

One exception to the rule was a 17½-pound coho taken Tuesday by Bud Strom of Sooke while trolling with an anchovy, 80 feet of line and 14 ounces of weight off Possession Point at Sooke.

Chinooks to 35 pounds form the bulk of catches, however, with best success off Secretary Island, The Bluffs and Possession. A few chinooks have also turned up at Otter Point.

Anchovies, minnows and strip are working well for the chinooks and fishermen are trying everything for the coho.

Henry Rollins boated the heaviest chinook around the southern end of Vancouver Island this week with a 47½-pounder taken Wednesday while trollimg an anchovy off Bedford Island. Fishing has been generally good for chinooks and a few coho to 12 pounds between Church Island and the Trap Shack using strip, minnows and anchovies.

Pedder Bay returns have tapered off a little but some chinooks to 33½ and coho to 10½ are coming in for fishermen drift-fishing with Pirkens off the Kelp Bed.

Chinooks to 25 pounds and a few coho are showing off Chain Island, The Flats and Victoria Golf Club shoreline at Oak Bay.

Sidney waters have dropped right off — with the exception of a 40-pounder landed Thursday morning by Bill Evans off James Island on a white flashtail, 30 pulls of line and a small planer — and only a few chinooks to seven pounds and fewer coho relieve the picture off Wain Rock at Deep Cove.

Chinooks to 10 pounds form a fair catch off Coles Bay, Bamberton and McKenzie Bay with strip and hootchies the main producers.

In Finlayson Arm, action has heated up a lot. The Deep Hole, Chesterfield Rock and Misery Bay are yielding chinooks to 10 pounds and a few coho to nine. The chinooks are biting on nearly everything but the coho show a marked preference for Squirts trolled with about 12 ounces of weight.

Further up-Island, good chinook catches were recorded at Cowichan Bay, Bold Bluff and Tent Island. Porlier Pass is producing some excellent coho.

A few coho averaging about four pounds are turning up off Entrance Island and coho to 12 pounds are providing red-hot action off the Ballenas Islands, Lasqueti Island and Hornby Island. A few chinooks in the 20-pound range have been caught in the same areas and waters between Clark Rock and Hudson Rock are yielding the odd chinook to 26 pounds.

Strip-casters are getting the top catches in all areas although bucktailers have scored early in the morning.

Alberni Inlet is yielding chinooks to 33 pounds and a few coho to seven on strip, plugs and T-spoons.

Fishermen working off the south end of Quadra Island, Pallister Rock and Whaling Station Bay are landing top-notch catches of coho to 8½ pounds on bucktails and Buzz-Bombs.

At Campbell River, tyee topping off in the 40s are coming from the River Mouth, Dolphins, Forestry Pool, Tyee Pool, Cape Mudge and Whiskey Point areas while concentrations of coho to eight pounds are showing off Butler Point, the Standard Marina, Red Can, Black Can and Cape Mudge.

Peggy Lamontagne captured first prize in Zone "B" (from James to Galiano Island) with a 23¼-pounder landed in Cowichan Bay and a prize for the heaviest fish landed by a woman in the zone . . . Phyllis Mills won the woman's prize in Zone "A" with a four-pounder . . . Len Carleton won the coho prize in Zone "A" with an 8¾-pounder and Bob Faith took the corresponding Zone "B" prize with an seven-pounder . . . Scott Mahon won the award for junior fishermen . . . News Strike Aids Yanks?

By Canadian Press

No news is good news, it's been said, and manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore Orioles concurs,

"The newspaper strike in New York may be the best thing that ever happened to the Yankees," Weaver said after the Yanks beat the Orioles 6-2 Thursday night and extended their American League winning streak to seven in a row.

Since New York's three major dailies were shut down by a strike Aug. 9, the Yanks have pulled themselves together to win 15 of their last 20 games. Weaver thinks it's more than coincidence.

"Probably the same words are being said and the same things are being done," Weaver said of the sometimes turbulent Yankees. "But the public is not reading about it, and the Yanks aren't either."

New York has taken over second place in the American League East during their hot streak, passing Milwaukee Brewers, but has managed to chop only two games off Boston Red Sox lead and still trail by 6½.

"If we keep winning, anything can happen," said Yankees manager Bob Lemon. "Teams have lost after having a six-game lead with 12 to go. Boston still has to win it. Nobody's conceded yet."

In other American League games Thursday, Minnesota Twins downed Detroit Tigers 4-1 and Milwaukee blanked Cleveland Indians 1-0 before losing the second half of a twinbill, 12-6.

In the National League, San Diego Padres defeated Montreal Expos 6-1 and Cincinnati Reds whipped St. Louis Cardinals, 11-6.

Reliever Mark Lee of the Padres had a little something extra going for him — inspiration.

"My dad just got out of the hospital and was sitting in the stands," said the young hurler who notched his second save of the year as the Padres snapped a three-game losing streak.

"My dad had never seen me get a win or a save," said Lee, "I wasn't going to get knocked out of this one."

Barlow Defeated In Doubles Match

TORONTO — Wendy Barlow of Victoria, scheduled to play in a singles semi-final today, was eliminated in a women's doubles tussle at the Canadian international tennis tournament here Thursday.

Christienne Jolissaint and Isabelle Villiger of Switzerland ousted Barlow and Ava Pfaff of West Germany, 6-7, 7-5, 6-0.

In other matches, Toronto's Glen Michibata was eliminated in a quarter-final match 6-4, 6-2 by Marco Ostoya of Yugoslavia.

In other quarter-final matches, Sweden's Per Hjertquist, the No. 1 seed, defeated Alejandro Ganzabal of Argentina 6-4, 6-2; Blaine Willenborg, U.S., defeated Christo Steyn of South Africa 5-7, 6-1, 6-2 and Steffan Simonsson of Sweden defeated west Germany's DDamar Keretic, 6-1, 6-3.

In today's semi-final action, Ostoya, who is unseeded, meets Willenborg while Hjertquist plays No. 3 seed Simonsson.

Mike Sharp Downs Sheik

Mike Sharpe defeated The Sheik by disqualification Thursday in the feature match of a professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

In other matches, Denny Alberts and Salvator Martino downed the two Kangaroos, Jake Roberts outgrappled The Outlaw and Goldie Rogers downed Jim Cook.

'Competitive Pals' Leading Chase for Junior Golf Title

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — James Duff of Montreal and Eric Kaufmanis of Aylmer, Que., say they have a friendly but intense rivalry going at the Canadian junior golf championship.

"We have always been very competitive," Duff said Thursday following his two-under-par 70 that vaulted him into the second-round lead at the Lingham Country Club.

Kaufmanis matched Duff's round to move into sole possession of second place in the field of 125 golfers at 146, followed by four others including first-round leader Matthew Shaw of West Paradise, N.S., Jean-Louis Lamarre of Montreal, Stewwart Ranft of Port Carling, Ont., Dan Maue of Kitchener, Ont., and Derek Thornley of Vancouver.

Shaw lost his poise on the rambling 6,600-yard par-72 course, firing a 78. Ranft had the low round of the day with 69.

The combined total of 437 for the Quebec team lifted them to an overwhelming 15-stroke victory in the provincial competition over a scrappy New Brunswick squad. Defending-champion Ontario finished third with a total of 455, with Nova Scoita fourth at 466.

British Columbia, paced by 16-year-old sensation Rick Gibson of Victoria, ended fifth at 469 followed by Manitoba at 473, Saskatchewan at 474, Alberta at 478, Prince Edward Island at 486 and Newfoundland at 487.

It was Quebec's fourth title in the last 11 years.

The individual field was cut to 70 for the final two rounds, with the champion being decided Saturday.

Gibson is given an outside chance of becoming the youngest golfer ever to win the junior title. Gibson shot a disappointing 78 and with his opening round 73, he sits tied with four others for sixth place at 151.

Gibson and Rick Sepp of Mount Hope, Ont., are tied for the juvenile lead. for golfers under 16 years of age.

Wendy Enjoys Being Celebrity

NEW YORK (AP) — Suddenly Wendy Turnbull is a celebrity—and she loves it.

"It's a lot more fun this way," said the 25-year-old Australian, who burst into the upper ranks of women's tennis by beating Rosie Casals, Virginia Wade and Martina Navratilova in last year's United States Open before bowing to Chris Evert in the finals.

"When I went back to Australia I got a lot of publicity. And when I won the Wimbledon doubles this year they showed it live on Australian TV. People had to stay up till 3 a.m. to watch me play. Isn't that great?"

Turnbull, seeded fourth this year, defeated Katja Ebbinghaus of West Germany 6-2, 7-5 Thursday in a first-round women's singles match at the U.S. Open on a day in which rain played havoc with the program, forcing postponement of two-thirds of the scheduled matches.

Before the rains came, 15th-seeded John McEnroe advanced to the third round in men's singles by defeating Jaime Fillol of Chile 6-4, 6-7, 6-1, while in women's first-round matches sixth-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia beat Kathy Harter 6-1, 6-4 and seventh-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands defeated Terry Holladay 6-3, 6-2.

Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa dropped a 6-2, 6-4 decision to 14th-seeded JoAnne Russell of the U.S.

Matches that were rained out were rescheduled for today, including the completion of a second-round men's singles match between fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and Vic Amaya that was interrupted by rain. Gerulaitis had won the first set 6-2 but was trailing 5-6 in the second when play was stopped.

Also postponed by rain was a second-round singles match between second-seeded Jimmy Connors and Steve Docherty of Australia, and a first-round match between ninth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain and Adriano Panatta of Italy.

What changes have taken place over the past year for Turnbull?

"I'm being interviewed more," she responded with a laugh, enjoying the attention of the reporters who surrounded her after her match.

"I'm playing a lot more tournaments, and now when I go out there, I go out to win. The other players know I've got more confidence now."

Ontario Wins Seniors Title

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Anne Gookin, a former Canadian now living in Monument, Colo., won the Canadian senior ladies' golf championship Thursday with a 36-hole total of 163 following an eight-over-par 83 during play on the final day.

Gookin finished one stroke ahead of two Ontario golfers — Edie Creed and Betty Ingram — and three strokes ahead of Victoria's Joan Lawson, who closed with an 83 and a 166 total. Defending champion Marg Todd, also of Victoria, also had an 83 on the final day but finished eight strokes behind the winner.

The powerful Ontario team of Katherine Helleur, Creed, Ingram and Mary Marvin won the interprovincial team title with a 494 total, 13 strokes ahead of defending champion British Columbia. Quebec finished third at 516.

The team title is calculated on the basis of the three top scores from each four-member team.

"It's like a dream come true," Gookin said after her victory. "My heart is still here in Canada, I still have my Canadian citizenship and I wanted to do well in front of many old friends."

Gookin has lived in the United States for 20 years.

Ontario's team title was its third since the competition began in 1971. British Columbia has won all the others.

Constant rains drenched the Em'Joie course at Endicott, N.Y., and postponed the opening round of the $225,000 B.C. Open golf tournament, a regularly-scheduled Professional Golfers' Association event.

Actually, the delay may boost attendance for the four-day tournament with a final round now scheduled for a holiday, officials said.

The winner of this tournament, named after a catroon strip, takes home $45,000.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Tonight many boats will be on their way to take part in the Maple Bay Yacht Club Annual Labor Day Weekend Regatta, which has become one of the most popular end-of-summer events over the years.

There is racing for every kind of sail craft, ranging from tiny Sabots to ocean raoers.

And, apart from the competitors, there are always plenty of other boats that make the trip to join in the festivities. The club's new mooring facilities should be packed.

The large boats will be racing with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings, getting in three races on Saturday and Sunday.

There will be a five-race series for Cal 20s, Lightnings, Snipes, Fireballs, Flying Juniors and Lasers.

Depending on the wind, Sabots, Mirrors and Mintos will have either a five or seven race series.

Things may get more than a little exciting in Sansum Narrows on Sunday. The Cowichan Bay Outhouse Racing Society plans to hold its windup race from the Cowichan Bay boat ramp to Maple Bay, things getting under way at noon. Let's hope the sailboats' course avoids that particular stretch of water that day.

Several boats of Victoria's Thunderbird fleet will be in Port Townsend this weekend to take part in the Washington port's annual regatta and the regional Thunderbird championships. About 30 boats from Seattle, Vancouver, Victoria and other points are expected to compete.

Among the Victoria boats will be Glen Higgins' Freeway, John Dewey's Shuttlecock, John Malleson's Sunday, John Booth's Umpka and Ross Sinclair's Swallow. Gerry Porter will be there in his Catalina 27 Sunshine to serve on the race committee.

Most of the local Catalina sailors, however, will be racing in their own regatta at Cadboro Bay. There will be five races —three on Saturday and two on Sunday— with two divisions, one for boats with no flying sails and the other for those using spinnakers. The first race starts 10 a.m. Saturday.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be hosting yet another regatta, this one for six-metres. There will be a five-race series plus a team race between Victoria and Seattle boats.

They may not be racing machines but the boats taking part in the first annual Classic Sailboat Festival, to be held in the Inner Harbor tis weekend, should provide some fine sights for onshore watchers.

Like any other proud skippers, I'm sure their owners will only be too happy to extol the virties of their particular craft.

The highlight will come on Sunday when the boats, which are coming from various points in the Pacific Northwest, will take part in a sailpast.

Parading under power to the entrance of the harbor, they will hoist sail and are expected to be off the Ogden Point breakwater at 11 a.m. They will then sail south-southeast to a point two miles off the breakwater, rounding the quarantine buoy and heading back toward Brotchie Ledge.

Wind willing, the salute will be taken at 1 p.m. in the area between Brotchie Ledge and the breakwater.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailign Association, has no club racing this weekend in order to allow members a chance to go to Maple Bay. Last Sunday the squadron's Sailerette fleet held its annual Round Robin series. The wimning skipper was Rod Ives, runners-up being Roger Beaudry and Gordie Churchill.

The first fiberglass Island Drifter 25 to be built at Outer Harbor Marine Ways in Esquimalt was launched with the traditional fanfare this week. She's a spritely looking little craft. Her proud owner, Ian McKay of Sidney has chosen the name Whiskyjack for his latest love.

With summer coming to a close members of the Victoria Canoe Club are planning fr the new season ahead. They'll meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the upper hall of St. Martin-in-the-Fields Church to map out their itinerary.

Blood Supply Short For Weekend

With a long holiday weekend coming up, Red Cross officials expect heavy demand for whole blood stocks in hospital emergency rooms — and the Victoria area is 210 pints short of its commitment to the provincial blood bank.

Spokesman Gerry Savage said Tuesday he feared the weekend could plunge the stocks even lower than earlier in the summer, when there was a 500-pint shortfall before one clinic.

One problem the clinic isn't facing at present which often handicaps blood drives is sports playoffs on television.

Savage said the director of blood donor recruitment has found a direct relationship between attendance at donor clinics and overlapping playoff games that keep fans glued to their TV screens.

A push to improve the Victoria contribution will be made in a week of clinics Sept. 11-15. Locations will be Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, Sept. 11 and 12; Camosun College Interurban campus, Sept. 13; Sooke community hall, Sept. 14, and Victoria city hall antechamber, Sept. 15.

Auditor-General's Aide Appointed

HAYWARD
. . . panel's choice

Robert Hayward has been appointed deputy auditor-general of B.C., Auditor-General Erma Morrison said Thursday.

Mrs. Morrison said the appointment was based on the recommendation of a senior advisory panel following a national search for suitable candidates.

She refused, in an interview, to disclose Hayward's age or salary, saying she felt it was not important.

Mrs. Morrison did say Hayward's post, the senior staff position in her department, was equivalent to that of an associate deputy minister. Salary range in this category is between $35,000 and $45,000 a year.

Hayward, a chartered accountant, was director of the Victoria audit office in the office of the comptroller-general and audit director of special services in the office of the auditor-general before his appointment.

According to public accounts, he was paid $37,000 for the year ended March 31, 1977. He has also worked for Price, Waterhouse and Co. and the federal government.

Phenomenal Use Of Parks: Report

The popularity of provincial parks is indicated by preliminary park-use reports compiled by the department of recreation.

"Visitor attendence was phenomenal at some parks," said parks director Tom Lee."Campsite attendance was up at least 10 per cent and in some parks as high as 14 per cent. Day-use attendance was up 32 per cent."

"What's more, we had few problems," he added. "The parks were well looked after. The staff did a good job."

Some park superintendents reported at the height of the holiday season queueslined up for admittance to campground sites were a common sight. Some campgrounds were full throughout the summer.

John Walters, information officer, said the use of provincial parks on Vancouver island for picnics and day family outings increased beyond expectations.

"The day use of parks increase by 38 per cent, campground use by 11 per cent." he said. Park attendance on the mainland was very much the same."

The Bowron Lakes, situated about 20 miles east of Wells, a canoeist's paradise, saw visitor attendance increase by more than 10 per cent, he said.

Walters said park figures are conservative.

"Visitor attendance was probably much higher because we don't keep a count at all parks," he said. "We also don't keep a count of backpackers. But there are indications of a big increase in hikers and campers on wilderness trails.

He cited as an example the Mount Robeson trail where a steady stream of hikers daily moved to higher altidutes.

Satellite Would Aid Environment

If Canada develops its own surveillance satellite in the next decade, Environment Canada likely will be the biggest beneficiary.

According to E. A. Van Koughnett, manager of the Canadian Sursat program in Ottawa, Environment Canada has initiated 22 experiments, the largest number of projects designed to help define the options for a wide range of participation in the project.

He spoke Thursday to delegates at the Fifth Canadian Symposium on Remote Sensing, describing some of the work of a five-man team drawing up suitable surveillance experiments as part of the feasibility study.

Fisheries and environment top the list of potential users which include energy, mines and resources, transport and agencies such as search and rescue and pollution control.

To date, the only all-Canadian spacecraft have been short-lived research vehicles and fixed-orbit communications satellites.

If current planning survives a succession of economic restraints on Canadian science and technology policy, it is hoped a Sursat vehicle can be placed in orbit by the middle or late 1980s, Van Koughnett indicated.

The four-day conference drew researchers from across Canada, parts of the U.S. and Europe, and concluded with Thursday's sessions at the Empress Hotel.

Confiscated Fish Sold By U.S. Gov't

SEATTLE (AP) — The United States government acted as a temporary fishmonger this week to dispose of a confiscated catch that cost a Canadian gillnetter $1,000.

Personnel from the National Marine Fisheries Service sold the seized fish for $800 in Port Angeles, Dick Cohen, special U.S. Assistant Attorney, said Thursday.

Joseph Negero of Vancouver agreed to pay a $1,000 civil penalty Wednesday after the government offered to drop a criminal charge of illegal fishing in U.S. waters, Cohen said.

The government also returned the 9.6-metre gillnet boat to its owners, the Canadian Fishing Co. of Vancouver, a subsidiary of the New England Fish Co. of Seattle, Cohen said. Negero was leasing the boat.

Display Day Arrives For Rock Star Clones

ATLANTA — Promoter Danny O'Day's rock-star "clones" make their first public appearance today at the Southeastern Fair and their mentor has announced himself well pleased with their appearance.

Five unknown musicians underwent cosmetic surgery to make them resemble the late stars Elvis Presley — male and female versions — Jim Croce, Janis Joplin and Jim Morrison.

The musicians already were imitating their heroes before their physical transformations.

"I'm quite satisfied with the results," said O'Day.

Those who had the transitional surgery were Duke O'Connell, 29, who will portary Morrison; Jesse Bolton, 31, who will be the Presley of the late 60s, Erin Rhyne, 23, a woman imitating Elvis in his younger years; Mona Moore, 27, as Joplin, and Mark Hazebrouck, 28, as Croce.

Gran Walton In Hospital

RACINE, Wis. — Actress Ellien Corby who portrays Grandma Walton in the television series The Waltons, has been hospitalized at St. Mary's Medical Centre.

The hospital listed her in fair condition Thursday, and declined to disclose the reason for her hospitalization.

NOTHING ROTTEN FOR STARLET MARIA

TORONTO — Maria, the latest feline television and movie starlet, enjoys her work.

The three-year-old Russian Blue cat has the lead in a new Canadian movie, Something Rotten, to be released next spring.

"Maria's getting $775 for five days' work in the movie," trainer, Mike Klingbell, said. "That gives her pretty good food and she's quite pleased to do work for that food."

While she's working, Maria has her choice of shrimp, lobster, octopus, beef hearts or kidney.

"GOLDIE HAWN HAS CAPTURED MY HEART. 'Foul Play' is her oyster from start to finish, and she swallows it whole. Never has she looked lovelier, nor has she ever been in a film better suited to her. A deliciously high-spirited romp with the screen's most gifted comedienne in the driver's seat. A real sleeper. The perfect movie escapism to combat heat rash and the heartbreak of psoriasis. 'FOUL PLAY' IS AN ANTIDOTE TO URBAN HUMIDITY, LIMP COLLARS, AND SUMMER LISTLESSNESS."

30-Year Term for Cobra Case Woman

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Charlotte Durfee's long, dark eyelashes fluttered nervously as the judge read the verdict:

"Guilty of conspiracy to commit first-degree murder."

Clad in a stylish, white dress, the attractive, blond divorcee stood otherwise motionless. A few minutes later she was in the Dane County Jail facing 30 years in prison.

Mrs. Durfee, 47, was convicted Thursday on a charge she hired Loren Moore, a mild-mannered former college teacher, to try to kill her millionaire ex-husband with cobra venom so it would look like a heart attack.

"I was in love with her and thought she was in love with me," Miles Durfee, 74, of Janesville, said. "I have no malice whatsoever. I don't want to see her hurt."

Mrs. Durfee received about $298,000 from Durfee's $1.8 million estate. Durfee said his ex-wife would have received more had she not tried to kill him.

Police said Mrs. Durfee signed a murder contract hand-written by Moore. Moore was to kill Durfee, who was in the process of divorcing Charlotte Durfee on grounds of adultery.

Moore taught college business courses in the area and met Mrs. Durfee when she was a student a few years ago. He testified he first considered shooting Durfee with a gun Mrs. Durfee had given him, but was not a good enough marksman.

Then he asked a Madison zoo attendant for snake venom that would make it look like Durfee suffered a fatal heart attack.

The zoo attendant, Thornton Willoughby, notified police and Moore was arrested last summer as he left Willoughby's apartment with a syringe and a vial of what Moore believed was cobra venom.

Moore pleaded no contest to a charge of trying to solicit murder, but his sentence has not been set because of a plea bargain that involved his testimony against Mrs. Durfee.

"To me it was a fascinating game I just was getting deeper and deeper into and couldn't get out of it," Moore said.

Judge P. Charles Jones set $10,000 cash bail or a $25,000 property bond for Mrs. Durfee and a pre-sentence investigation was ordered.

Just Coincidence, Author Claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Novelist and playwright N. Richard Nash insists it is only coincidence that his latest novel, The Last Magic, was published shortly after the death of Pope Paul VI.

Nash, whose earlier novel, East Wind, Rain, was a best-seller, said he got the idea for his latest book shortly after the death of Pope John XXIII. The Last Magic deals with a dying pope and the Roman Catholic Church in a changing society in which there are terrorist attacks on the church and its clergy.

"I've long been interested in terrorism, the role of the church in this changing society of ours — the marriage of priests, that sort of thing," he said.

"But it wasn't until seven or so years ago that I seriously started taking notes and researching, and when that was done I spent these past three years writing it."

Nash said he got his start in writing while teaching philosophy at a junior college for women and directing amateur productions at the school on the side.

"It was awfully hard finding plays that just had women in them," he said. "Eventually I couldn't, so I sat down and, over the weekend, I wrote the Play I needed and then put it on."

Nash soon became a professional playwright and now has seven plays to his credit — the most widely-known are, The Rainmaker, which he said has been translated into 40 language, and The Jaguar, which has been translated into 15.

He got into movie writing when he did the screenplay of, The Rainmaker, and then into television, writing dramas in the 1950s.

"I did another, and I found that I enjoyed writing novels so much more than screenplays that I drug out the first draft of a novel I had written years earlier and rewrote it. It became East Wind, Rain."

'Men the Loneliest. . .'

TORONTO (UPI) — Men are more likely than women to suffer loneliness, low morale and an inability to carry on a normal life after the death of a spouse, a U.S. psychologist reported today.

Carol Barrett of Wichita State University said the needs of elderly widowers have been largely overlooked. She said help administered prior to the wife's death might later prevent much of the disabling grief a widower otherwise is likely to experience.

In a report prepared for the American Psychological Association annual convention, Ms. Barrett said widows outnumber widowers four to one and, in addition, tend to be younger. She said those figures imply that widows may get more "social support" from female friends whose husbands have died.

Ms. Barrett said a study of 379 elderly people, about half of them widowed, showed consistently different responses from men and women in six major areas of life after the death of a spouse.

"Widowers are more likely than their female counterparts to experience low morale, to feel lonely and dissatisfied with life, to predict poor future health, to need help with household responsibilities, to have difficulty obtaining necessary medical appointments, to eat poorly and to experience negative attitudes toward their own continued learning," she said.

"They are also less likely than widows to want a confident or to want to talk about widowhood or death."

Ms. Barrett said her study showed elderly men whose wives are still alive do not suffer similar problems.

"It is apparent that the differences found were not the result of general trends for older women and men," she said. "Rather, the experience of widowhood led to unique differences between the sexes.

"This should not alleviate our concern for widows. Rather, it should raise our concern about elderly widowers. Their relative disinterest in discussing their own situation is likely to be an obstacle in social services and other treatment (attempts)."

CP SHUFFLES SOME STAFF IN TORONTO

TORONTO (CP) — Appointment of Mel Sufrin, 53, as general news editor of The Canadian Press, effective Sept. 3, was announced today.

Sufrin, general sports editor of the news co-operative since December, 1974, will succeed Ken Smith, 46, who becomes newsfeatures editor when Jack Tracy, who has held that position since 1973, retires in October.

Chuck Svoboda, a member of the sports department for the last eight of his 12 years with CP, will succeed Sufrin as general sports editor.

Natural Gas Crisis 'Just 6 Years Away'

OTTAWA (CP) — Natural gas will be in tight supply in only six years despite the current surplus of the fuel in the West, Imperial Oil Ltd. says.

The company, the largest oil firm in the country, said in a brief filed Thursday with the National Energy Board that demand for gas will be running close to supply from the western provinces by 1985.

It adds that by 1992, the current producing areas in Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia no longer will be able to meet the country's needs and frontier supplies will be needed in southern markets.

Alberta producers have been pressing Ottawa to allow more exports to the United States to eliminate what they describe as "a gas bubble."

Imperial estimates the size of the surplus at 400 billion cubic feet a year. It says 3.1 trillion cubic feet can be produced annually to meet total market demands of 2.7 trillion — 1.7 trillion for domestic consumers and one trillion in exports to the United States.

As a result of the surplus, increased exports to the U.S. should be allowed to aid in oil industry development and to help the economy in general by lowering the balance of payments deficit on energy trade, the brief says.

Quebec Sales Tax Stand To Cost More in Taxes

By PETER HADEKEL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC — Quebecers will have to pay more income tax next year to pay for the Quebec government's one year program of selective sales tax cuts.

Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau announced Thursday that a 6 per cent increase in personal exemptions scheduled for January 1, 1979 will be delayed a year to provide the government with $145 million in extra revenue.

The revenue-raising scheme is designed to recuperate federal money paid out in the form of $85 cheques to Quebec tax payers.

The Quebec government was seeking the money to pay for its one year abolition of provincial sales tax on clothing, textiles, furniture and shoes.

But Federal Finance Minister Jean Chretien, who wanted Quebec to participate with other provinces in a general sales tax reduction on all items, refused to pay the money to the Quebec government.

He chose to distribute the $186 million to individual taxpayers in the form of cheques which most Quebecers have already received.

While Quebecers must wait another year for the indexing of personal exemptions to inflation promised in Parizeau's April budget, they will not be forced to send their $85 federal cheques to Quebec.

"They can keep the money. The government to whom it belongs gives it to them," Parizeau said.

He admitted that the average taxpayer will lose between $72 and $100 next year because of the decision to postpone indexing of exemptions. Quebec remains the only province in Canada where income taxes are not adjusted in some form to the inflation rate.

But Parizeau said exemptions in 1980 will be indexed to take account of the one year postponement.

Parizeau's scheme still leaves the province $41 million short of the $186 million needed to finance the sales tax cuts.

The finance minister said no decision will be taken on how to raise the remaining money until the federal government explains its current round of spending cuts more clearly.

He said "the current federal somersaults, have caused uncertainty over how provincial programs will be affected.

Liberal leader Claude Ryan said Parizeau is pretending to give taxpayers "a gift" of the $85 federal cheques when in reality he is increasing taxes.

"It also causes a new injustice for low wage earners since they won't get the reduction in taxes they were promised in this year's budget, Ryan said.

2 Quads Doing Well

TORONTO (CP) — Two of three surviving quadruplets born a month ago to Maria Denardo were removed from intensive care Thursday, a hospital spokesman said.

Angelo and Tony Denardo were listed in good condition.

A surviving girl, Teresa-Maria, has a lung ailment and remained in serious condition in the intensive neonatal care section of the Hospital for Sick Children.

Brainstormers Eye Growth

OTTAWA (CP) — Science Minister Judd Buchanan announced Thursday establishment of a committee to advise the federal government on how best to stimulate research and development.

The eight-member committee is to be headed by John Shepherd, executive-director of the Science Council of Canada, another federal body set up to advise the government on over-all science policy.

The Liberal government has been harshly criticized for several years by various science groups and by opposition parties for cutting back on funds allocated for research and development.

Critics have charged that Ottawa's level of support has left Canada investing proportionately less on research and development than all of the Western industrialized nations.

In June, Buchanan announced a new target for research and development expenditures of 1.5 per cent of the gross national product (GNP) by 1983.

The minister also unveiled a $28.7 million program designed to stimulate industrial research and to create jobs.

(Four Russian Eagles)—These were awarded as the government's highest citation to the Smirnoff family as the sole purveyor of vodka to the Czars of Russia.

(Purveyors to the Russian Imperial Court)—Czar Alexander III in Moscow bestowed this title on the Smirnoff family in 1886 in appreciation for their superior vodka.

(Ste. Pierre Smirnoff Fls.)—Founded by Pierre Smirnoff who, in 1888, was elevated to Personal Commercial Advisor to Emperor Czar Alexander III. The vodka which bears his name has won awards in world expositions from Philadelphia to Moscow.

(No. 21)—One of the original formulas brought out of Russia by Vladimir Smirnoff in his escape to the West following the Russian Revolution in 1917.

(International Renown)—Smirnoff is licensed for production in over 35 countries and sold in nearly every civilized country in the world.

Chiefs' Visit To Queen 'Just Theatre'

FREDERICTON (CP) — Sending 300 Indian chiefs to talk to the Queen about Canada's constitution would provide "live theatre" but would not do much to solve Indian problems, Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner said Thursday.

"Some people would rather go to London than work on the harder issues," Faulkner said at a news conference during the annual assembly of the National Indian Brotherhood.

If the Indians want to go to London and if the Queen wishes to see them, that's fine, "but I'm not sure it would change much," said Faulkner.

On Wednesday, the assembly approved a motion calling for a delegation of Indian chiefs to visit Britain to urge the Queen and the British government not to approve patriation of Canada's constitution.

The brotherhood is upset by constitutional reform proposals presented to Parliament by Prime Minister Trudeau. It says the proposals ignore native rights and Indians' special status.

The trip by the Indian chiefs is planned within the next year. There are 510 chiefs in Canada and the Brotherhood expects to send about 300 to London by chartered aircraft.

AXE TO MISS INDIAN AFFAIRS

FREDERICTON (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner said Thursday that recent government spending cuts do not apply to the Indian side of his portfolio.

He told the annual National Indian Brotherhood assembly that $31 million of the $32 million cut from his department applies to northern development and parks. The other $1 million related to a staff reduction at departmental headquarters.

He added that the Indian affairs budget is the only one not touched by the cuts.

National House Of Sport?

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Iona Campagnolo has a dream. The minister of fitness and amateur sport wants to preside over a national House of Sport, a sort of jock central.

The House would be a home for all the components of her small but sinewy and muscular empire. It would bring under one roof the offices of the fitness and amateur sport branch of the department of national health and welfare, the national offices of sports governing bodies, and the administration offices of the National Centre for Sport and Recreation, Inc.

The federal cabinet approved Campagnolo's dream, in principle, early in July. But it may be some time before the minister is able to smile in her sleep at the thought of her very own building, which is going to be located somewhere in the national capital region.

Treasury Board has to approve the expenditure, and that process is going to cause some hand-wringing and sweaty brows in these days of galloping government restraint.

And before that happens the department of national health and welfare, department of public works, and the treasury board secretariat have to do a joint assessment of "the rental (on a lease-purchase basis) and construction options with respect to the cost, location and other relevant aspects," as a cabinet document notes.

Lang Wrecking Federalism: MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang was accused Thursday of destroying the spirit of federalism to change its structures.

The accusation came from Progressive Conservative MP Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Grey-Waterloo), a member of the Senate-Commons committee on the constitution, as that 35-member committee concluded its third week of hearings.

"You would destroy true federalism to save federalism," Beatty told the recently-appointed justice minister.

He said the federal government's plan to make certain changes in the constitution without provincial consent is like the approach of the American troops in Vietnam "who used to say they had to destroy a village in order to save it."

Beatty was one of several committee members who attacked the justice minister on grounds that he, Prime Minister Trudeau and Federal-Provincial Relations Minister Marc Lalonde are determined to impose their wills on the provinces to move toward a new Canadian constitution.

Lang, who was given the justice portfolio less than a month ago, was making his first parliamentary appearance as justice minister.

Lang said his recent suggestion that the constitution could be amended by means of a national referendum if the federal and provincial governments are unable to agree is not directed at any province.

He also acknowledged, under questioning from opposition critics, that any province determined to challenge the federal government's proposals in court would be free to do so. The provincial government would merely have to ask its provincial court of appeal whether the federal reforms are constitutional, Lang said.

The minister put forward his referendum plan during the Aug. 9 meeting of the provincial first ministers in Regina. The 10 premiers unanimously denounced it.

He told the committee the premiers have failed to realize his referendum approach could work in their favor.

If all 10 provinces wanted certain changes in the constitution and the federal government refused to accept them, the deadlock could be broken by taking the matter directly to the people. It would be a national referendum, but majority support would be needed from the voters in each region before any action could be taken, Lang explained.

Bid-Rigging Admitted By Ex-Dredging Boss

TORONTO (CP) — Harold McNamara, a defendant in a fraud-conspiracy trial, testified Thursday he now believes there was extensive bid-rigging on dredging contracts when he was president of McNamara Corp. Ltd. but that at the time he knew nothing about it.

McNamara, 64, said dredging was not important to McNamara Corp. and he had little to do with it.

"I didn't know anything about it," he told defence lawyer David Humphrey. "I didn't care about it, I never set foot on a dredge. I can assure you it (dredging) never occupied more than a few minutes of my time."

In 1964, the year he became president, McNamara Corp., which has its headquarters in Toronto, was involved in $147 million in contracts. Dredging accounted for about $7 million.

Ten men and nine companies, including McNamara Corp., are charged with conspiring to defraud the government and public agencies of more than $4.27 million by rigging dredging bids.

McNamara dismissed as preposterous earlier testimony by Albin Louis Quinlan, a former vice-president in charge of McNamara's dredging division, that McNamara gave instructions to co-operate in bid-rigging with competitors because it was the only way the business could make money.

McNamara also dismissed Quinlan's descriptions of so-called scoresheets, said to have been used to record money owed by dredging companies to other dredging companies as a result of illegal deals.

PWA Ending Charters, Blames Stiff Red Tape

EDMONTON (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines of Calgary announced Thursday that it will phase out its intercontinental passenger charter operations in the spring of 1979.

In line with the decision, the Alberta government-owned airline will not go ahead with a $120-million program to purchase jumbo jets such as Boeing 747s, said Brian Johnson, PWA public relations director.

The company cited changing market conditions and stringent Canadian federal regulations which it said put it at a disadvantage competing with international charter operators. PWA lost about $750,000 in the first half of this year in international charter operations.

Stringent Canadian regulations were also blamed by Wardair International Ltd. of Edmonton, one of Canada's largest charter operations, as a main reason for its losing almost $2.5 million in the first half of this year.

Johnson said a company market study has recommended against the expansion program, planned for the early 1980s. After a decision was made not to purchase the jumbo jets, the company was forced to discontinue long-haul intercontintental charter passenger operations.

PWA's international passenger market now is serviced by two Boeing 707s, which seat about 180 passengers each, about half the capacity of the jumbo jets. The 707s will be phased out at the end of the winter charter season which ends next spring.

That is because "the international passenger market could no longer be economically serviced by aircraft of this type (707s) competing with new generation wide-bodied equipment and scheduled carriers whose low-fare structures are providing strong competition to charter carriers."

Johnson said about 200 of PWA's 3,300 employees will be affected by the decision to phase out the intercontinental charter operations but said retirements, normal attrition and opportunities arising from expansion and growth within other areas of the company's operations should minimize the impact.

PWA will continue to expand its domestic and short-haul international charter operations, mainly to Hawaii and the continental United States, and scheduled operations in Western Canada.

Edmonton Teachers To Strike?

EDMONTON (CP) — For the first time since April, 1921, teachers in city public schools have decided to go on strike.

The teachers, members of the Alberta Teachers Association local 37, Thursday voted 58 per cent to reject a contract offer and go on strike Sept. 7, two days after the school year begins.

There are 3,900 teachers in local 37, but only 2,994 voted at the meeting.

In April, 1921, teachers went on strike for two weeks over working conditions.

The board offer would have given teachers a 7.4 per cent across the board increase in salaries and allowances and an increase in board contributions to Alberta Health Care premiums to 75 per cent from 50. The larger health care premium contribution would have added another 0.1 per cent to the package.

insurance claimants whose gross income, including unemployment insurance, is more than $22,000 in any calendar year."

In July, the national unemployment rate was 8.4 per cent, with more than 900,000 jobless.

Next week, Finance Minister Jean Chretien will try to clarify some of the confusion about the effect on federal finances of the recent spate of announcements about spending cuts and new jobs.

Cullen said one problem of the current unemployment system "is that it is relatively easy to enter and reenter the unemployment insurance program, both for those joining the labor force for the first time and the 300,000 to 400,000 people a year who have to repeat unemployment insurance claims within 12 months.

Cullen said the prime function of the costly unemployment insurance program is to provide income maintenance between jobs "and yet some people now use it as their major source of income interrupted only by periods of short-term employment."

Also, current unemployment insurance law makes it easier for some employers to lay off employees without considering alternatives "because they know income support is easily available to those they lay off," Cullen said.

In Toronto, Roy A. Phillips, executive-director of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, called Cullen's statement a positive step in returning the unemployment insurance benefits program to an unemployment insurance program.

Phillips said the test would be whether more jobs for Canadians would result from the announcements.

Monique Begin, national health and welfare minister, claimed business in Toronto and western Canada is exerting a strong influence on the federal government to reduce expenditures on social programs.

Begin said pressure to cut aid to the poor is coming from groups such as chambers of commerce and Kiwanis clubs.

If Prime Minister Trudeau calls a fall general election, the proposals for tougher unemployment insurance rules and more make-work plans will be campaign promises.

On the job-creation side, Cullen said of the $710 million the government proposes to set aside for employment strategy in 1979-80, "there will be $570 million in cash expenditures, $100 million in foregone tax revenue and $40 million in unemployment funds used for job-creation."

Here are the major changes Cullen proposes for the unemployment insurance program:

—Repeaters, those who have received benefits within the last year, would need "insured weeks at least equal to the weeks of benefits drawn in their previous claim or they would have to have the insured weeks needed under the existing variable entrance requirement, whichever was greater."

—New entrants to the labor force or persons rejoining the labor force after a long absence would need more insured weeks to qualify for benefits. A proposed "dual entrance requirement" would make entrants show that they had at least 40 weeks of insured employment in the previous two years.

—There would be an increase in minimum insurable earnings, including a minimum in the number of hours that must be worked each week.

—There would be a reduction in the weekly benefit rate to 60 per cent of weekly insurable earnings from 66 2-3 per cent. That would result in a reduction in weekly benefit payments.

—A refinancing of the formula to pay for the program, which is paid by the government, employers and employees.

Unemployment benefits paid in the first four months of this year totalled $1.882 billion, up from $1.559 billion in the same period of 1977.

The average weekly benefit paid in April was $110.33, up from $101.18 in April, 1977.

Equal Shares Sought

Consultants to the newly-created Urban Transit Authority have recommended that B.C Hydro surcharges covering transit losses be shared equally by residential and business customers.

A report released by the UTA Thursday says the surcharges should be collected on a rate-per-meter basis rather than the present system based on how much power is used.

Consultants and UTA staff suggested an initial charge of about $1.25 on a bi-monthly hydro bill, rising to about $6 in the fifth year of UTA operations.

The UTA interim board tentatively accepted the staff proposals but will consult local governments affected by the charge before making a final decision at its next meeting Oct. 6.

Local governments will be responsible for a share of transit deficits under the new transit organization to go into effect April 1.

Property taxes, gasoline tax and power surcharges would be levied for transit deficits in 1982-83 or 1983-84.

tiate the three items but not to withdraw them."

An Air Canada spokesman said the airline was helping stranded international passengers find seats on other airlines, and would pay food and hotel expenses for the first day of any delay.

Within Canada, CP Air, regional air carriers, railways, bus lines and even ferry services were strained to the limit as they prepared for the Labor Day weekend.

Passengers stranded at Vancouver International Airport because of the strike-lockout seem surprisingly resigned to waiting three or four days for an alternative flight.

"We checked in Tuesday but our chances of getting a flight today are very, very slim," Montreal-bound David Travers said Thursday. "From now it's going to be a matter of sitting out here and waiting."

The Travers are among many passengers who bought low-price Canadian charter class tickets.

Until Tuesday, CP Air, which is picking up the bulk of stranded travellers, was giving these passengers a lower priority than those who paid the full economy price. Now they are being put on a standby list on a first-come, first-served basis along with regular passengers.

Youth fare passengers, who are placed at the bottom of the standby list, are having the worst time. Many are getting relatives to make up the difference for a full fare.

In a related development, about 200American Airlines baggage handlers protesting proposed changes in their duties walked off their jobs Thursday at Los Angeles International Airport, triggering delays of up to 1½ hours, an airline spokesman said.

Spokesman Bill Hipple said no flights were cancelled as a result of the work stoppage by the members of Transport Workers Union, Local 502.

Old Timers Take on Malahat

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Antique car buffs all around the Pacific Northwest are preparing their steeds for the fourth annual Malahat Challenge on Saturday, Sept. 9.

Sponsored by the Victoria chapter of the Vintage Car Club of Canada and the B.C. Vintage Car Club, the "race" is restricted to cars built in 1915 or earlier.

Leaving Nanaimo at various times, the cars must finish in front of the Legislative Buildings by 4 p.m.

The Fred Bell Perpetual Trophy, named for the late Fred Bell of Nanaimo who initiated the first Malahat Challenge, goes to the oldest car finishing first, providing it has not won the race before.

At 9 p.m. that evening Victorians will be treated to another glimpse into the past as the antique cars carry out a gaslight parade around Beacon Hill Park.

One of the most interesting cars in the Malahat Challenge will be a 1911 Chalmers, belonging to Bruce McClung of 155 Goldfinch.

The clutch shattered shortly after the owner bought the car. Unable to make the repairs, the original owner kept it in storage for 63 years.

McClung says when he discovered the car it was "covered in dust and chicken dung" and one of five in a barn in eastern Washington.

Made by the Chalmers Motor Company of Detroit, the model originally sold for $1,500. It has a four-cycle engine and a top speed of 55 miles per hour. It's now valued at a ballpark figure of $20,000.

When McClung bought the car it had only 1,463 miles on the odometer.

He even has the original tools, spark plugs and owner's manual.

One of the most interesting features of the handsomely finished car is an explosive-type exhaust whistle.

McClung explains that in the old days drivers, when they came to an intersection, had to get out, look both ways and fire a gun to warn horse-drawn vehicles of their presence. If horses were in the area the car was to be taken into the bushes and camouflaged in case it panicked the horse. The exhaust whistle on the 1911 Chalmers wiped out the need for the driver to carry a gun.

One of the other five cars stored in the barn was an 1898 Black motor buggy, now owned by Bruce Hopkins of 187 Lohr Road.

Built by the Black Manufacturing Company of Chicago, the buggy still runs.

"It goes about four or five miles an hour," Hopkins says.

Its high wooden wheels, made of hickory, were designed so the car wouldn't get stuck in road ruts. Instead of a wheel, it's steered by a tiller.

Hopkins says the ancient buggy sold for $395. For extras, you could get a set of tires for $25, a steering wheel for between $10 and $12 and a top for another $10.

Too rickety to make the Nanaimo-Victoria run, the 1898 Black will remain in its shed on Sept. 9 while Hopkins makes the Malahat Challenge in another of his vintage cars — a 1914 White speedster, which he bought from the late Fred Bell.

Strange as it may seem, this model was made by the White Sewing Machine Company of Cleveland, Ohio.

Helped by Pat Hoole Jr., Hopkins has the speedster in good shape for the Sept. 9 testing. He was the first to finish in 1977 but the trophy went to an older car.

While many of the drivers and their passengers will dress in old-time rig, Hopkins says he'll wear coveralls and warm clothes because driving can become a chilly affair when you're exposed to the elements.

About 40 cars, one from Mount Shasta, Calif., are expected to take part in the Malahat Challenge, bringing colorful reminders of the past as they chug along the highway.

Brutus, Sealand's Stellar sea lion pup is dead but a successor may be on the way.

Brutus, born July 12 and the only Stellar to be born in captivity, was accidentally trampled by his 1,800-pound father Benjamin on Wednesday and an autopsy showed he died of internal injuries received from a blow on the neck.

Brutus usually spent the night sleeping on his father's back.

Tora, the mother, and Benjamin mated frequently after Brutus' birth and there's a reasonable chance that the 800-pound sea lion may be pregnant. The gestation period is 11 months, Sealand manager Angus Matthews says.

Matthews said Benjamin was despondent after Wednesday's accident, being lethargic and going off his food.

Most visitors to the Saanich Fair this weekend will be interested in the displays, and try to ignore the crowds.

But one who will be there specifically for the crowds will be Tory leader Joe Clark, meeting as many people as he can in preparation for the sometime election.

Clark will make a quick trip here from Vancouver, and be at the fairgrounds 2 - 5 p.m. Monday.

When Albino Luciani was elected Pope last month newspapers around the country scurried around trying to come up with new angles on the story.

The Campbell River Upper Islander was one of the few to get a local slant.

Pope John Paul, reported the paper, was a close relative of a Campbell River resident's late husband.

Amalia Tancon grew up in the same small northern Italian town as the new Pope and married one of his cousins. She last saw Luciani in 1973, on a visit to Italy, when the then future Pope was the Cardinal of Venice.

Tancon said she had lunch with him and they talked at length "about when he was young with my husband."

She says of Pope John Paul: "He is a simple person, very gentle."

Tancon also knew Luciani's mother, who died in 1948.

"She was a great person, that woman. His father was a socialist, and his mother tried really hard to make sure he never stopped their son from going into the priesthood. She worked hard at that."

The Anglican Bishop of B.C., Roy Gartrell, says one of the unforgettable impressions he brought back from the recent Lambeth Conference of Anglican bishops in Canterbury, England, was the unquenchable spirit of the 20-strong contingent of bishops from Uganda.

They played an active role in the three weeks of discussions, apparently undaunted by the knowledge that their every word and action was being recorded by three of Uganda dictator Idi Amin's secret police who were accredited to the conference as news media representatives.

"To witness their courage was a humbling experience," Gartrell recalls.

For the first time in its history the Naden band of CFB Esquimalt has women in its ranks.

The three women, recent graduates of the school of music at the base, are Pte. Robbie Hutchinson, who plays the oboe, Pte. Judy Reside, who plays the flute, and Pte. Connie Mayor, who plays the clarinet.

Other recent graduates to join the band are drummer Pte. Dave Smith and Pte. Jim Reside, alto saxophone.

SUDS DAY SATURDAY

British Columbia draught beer will be delivered to Victoria pubs Saturday morning and bottles will be on the way to liquor stores Tuesday.

"We will make British Columbia beer available as quickly as the breweries can get it to us," Liquor Distribution Branch spokesman Janet Willson said today.

"I understand draught beer is going to the licencees (beer parlors) Saturday and bottled beer will be available next week."

Most of the remaining cans of American beer are expected to be sold today and Saturday.

"We have a long weekend coming up and I suspect most of the American beer will be sold off," she said.

Some beer parlors have cut the price on U.S. brands to sell their remaining supplies.

In Victoria, a spokesman for Labatt Breweries of B.C. said beer brewed in May, before the strike-lockout, was removed from refrigeration today and was being bottled.

"Beer can keep indefinitely in refrigeration. After it is bottled, it is good for another 90 days at least and probably for four months or more."

Ticket Drawn On the Irish

The name on the ticket drawn in Saturday's Irish Sweepstake says Roxanne Simmons but the most excited person in Victoria is her father-in-law.

"He bought the ticket for me," Mrs. Simmons, of 5533 Adderley, said this morning.

"I was really surprised. He is always buying tickets for himself and for other people. I'm certainly going to split the prize with him."

At 954 Byng, T.W. Simmons was beside himself.

"I've been buying these things for years and years.

"Never had a holiday, you know. I'm 65 now and somehow we never had the money or the time to go for a real vacation.

"There are so many things I'd like to buy. But the main thing is to take a holiday, after all these years.

"I'm retired now. Was an adjuster in the legal department of B.C. Hydro."

If Cashmere King wins the race Saturday morning he and Roxanne would split $100,000. Second place would bring $40,000 and third $20,000.

"My ticket has been drawn twice before on the Irish but I only won the minimum prize both times. Maybe I'll be lucky the third time."

However, 3 a.m. is just too early for him to get up to listen to the race.

Roxanne Simmons says she and her husband will stay up to hear the race.

"I've never bought a lottery ticket and I don't think my husband has either. But my father-in-law buys them all the time. I hope we win, for his sake."

Police Nab Two In Cheque Heist

Victoria police have arrested two suspects in connection with the theft early Wednesday of 180 welfare cheques worth more than $70,000.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the city detectives division said a 17-year-old youth and a 16-year-old juvenile were picked up Thursday afternoon. Some of the cheques were recovered.

Stewart was unable to say whether any of the cheques, made out to clients of the Blanshard Street human resources office, had been cashed. However, there are indications two attempts had been made at downtown stores.

The pair has been charged with breaking and entering the welfare office and theft. Both are expected to appear in court later today.

The juvenile is also facing a charge of escaping custody.

Meanwhile, Saanich police have warned merchants throughout southwestern B.C. to be on the lookout for persons attempting to cash 350 cheques stolen from Saanich firms in July.

Police, who weren't made aware of the thefts until this week, said 150 blank cheques were stolen from a car in the Gorge Road area July 14 and 200 other cheques stolen from a residence about the same time.

The 150 cheques are drawn on the account of Lagah Installations of Victoria from the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union on Shelborne.

The others are drawn on the account of Trojan Movers from the Toronto Dominion Bank in Town and Country.

Saanich police fraud investigators Dave Bryan and Gary Downer said Thursday three of the Lagah cheques were cashed by a man in July at Victoria grocery stores in amounts of $75, $140 and $150.

Two Trojan cheques have also shown up cashed at grocery stores in Greater Victoria. Both were in amounts of about $325. The passer was a young woman accompanied by a man.

Downer said the owners of both companies didn't report the thefts until they learned some of the cheques had been cashed.

The Lagah cheques bear serial numbers of between 251 to 400 and are light blue.

The Torjan cheques are green. Some may have a protectograph stamped on them.

Return with $5 entry fee to Victoria Times Great Inner Tube Race, Victoria Press Box 1978, 2621 Douglas, Victoria. Make cheques or money orders payable to Hampton Park Hustlers. No entries under 16 years of age. All entries must be received by Sept. 6.

Challenge Issued Teams

Five Days Left to Enter

Hampton Park Hustlers today issued challenges to Victoria teams to try to beat them in the Great Inner Tube Race.

"This challenge is aimed at the James Bay Athletic Association, the Esquimalt Oldies, the Tillicum Two-Spots and all the Slow-Pitch Fastball teams in the district as well as the Cougars, Budgets, Mussels, Shamrocks and everybody else," Hustlers spokesman Bob Painton said.

"We hope every team in the city will have at least one entry."

Proceeds from the event will go to help amateur sport.

Whether the Shamrocks enter depends upon how well they do in the Mann Cup series, which starts in Peterborough Monday.

"Coach Nirmal Dillon told me the Shamrocks will enter the Great Inner Tube Race if they win four games straight. They will get back Saturday, Sept. 9, one day before the race. And they will put the Mann Cup on display in our parade," Painton said.

"It would be a real thrill if they could win it four straight and be there in the parade."

The race is on rain or shine, Painton added.

"But don't worry about the weather. The sun always shines on Great Inner Tube Race day. That's why it is such a fun picnic for the spectators.

"It doesn't matter for the contestants, of course. No matter how hot it is, there's no way they're going to stay dry."

Official entry forms should be mailed in this weekend.

Or they can be left at any of the following sporting goods stores:

Ray's Sports Centre at 1692 Douglas and at 1918 Sooke in Colwood, LaPointe's Sporting Goods at 24 — 1153 Esquimalt and 3617 Douglas, Alexander's Sporting Goods at 2244 Sooke, Premier Sports and Cycle at 2965 Tillicum, Oak Bay Sporting Goods at 2077 Cadboro Bay and Kinney's World of Sports at 4450 West Saanich.

Health Problems Get High Priority

elizabeth forbes

Women are looking at health care in a new light.

They want to discuss their health problems in a direct and realistic manner in order that they may take responsibility for their own decisions.

These are facts Norrie Preston has discoverd since she was named programmer for Prime Time, an organization formed to bring services to women in their middle years.

She has also learned that a significant number of women in Canada are reacting to a proliferation of health data.

"This data counteracts the stereotyping which characterizes women as nervous, delicate, or more prone to psychosomatic ailments than men," she tells you.

It also suggests to women that the main responsibility for their own health is in their own hands.

Until recently "there has been the traditional notion that doctors had all the answers and that it was best to be a passive recipient, willing to undergo whatever treatment was recommended," Mrs. Preston explains further.

Even if it had been encouraged, "many women were too shy to try and find out, or they didn't know what questions to ask."

Now they have suddenly become vocal and they want to share in the decisions about what medical treatment or surgery is recommended for them.

Consequently, they are looking for solid information so that they may have more understanding of their health care needs.

To assist in meeting this search for knowledge, Prime Time and the Victoria Mental Health Centre are co-sponsoring a workshop program for women who are about to undergo, or have already undergone, hysterectomies.

Plans have been drawn up by a 10-member advisory committee on women's surgery.

There will be eight Thursday sessions, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., in the Friends Meeting Hall, 1832 Fern St., starting Sept. 21 and ending on Nov. 9.

The workshop will cover a number of aspects surrounding hysterectomies, including common concerns, all about the surgery itself and the emotions and feelings generated through after-effects or the shock of finding out such an operation is necessary.

Many women, the planning committee believes, are not prepared for these emotions and feelings and they don't know what they mean.

Very often major adjustments, both mentally and physically, are needed before or after the surgery and here's where Prime Time's workshop should prove of great benefit.

Qualified leadership will be provided, and there will be continuous dialogue between those who have had the operation and those faced with it.

In this way women with the surgery behind them will find answers to problems that have arisen during the recovery period.

Others, awaiting surgery, will find assurance and learn much about what will happen to them and to their bodies.

"Over-all the workshop will provide an opportunity for women to get together and exchange the most up-to-date and correct information," Norrie Preston says.

"It will be a self-help program with emphasis on women evaluating their own feelings and their own judgement."

Registration will be limited. So if you are interested, get in touch with Prime Time office right away. The telephone number is 388-6101.

Postscript — Turning to a completely different subject, I'm going to give you a quote from Iona Capangnolo, one of British Columbia smartest MPs.

Quite recently she said "one thing I have learned — even before my election as a Member of Parliament — is that accurate information and documented evidence are more helpful in winning arguments than simplistic slogans and shrill rhetoric.

"It may not be as entertaining — but it's usually more effective."

This wise saying came when Campagnolo was talking about the Export Development Corporation and its proposed loan for the development of a copper mine in Panama.

"Unfortunately," she said, "much of the discussion and criticism of the proposal is inaccurate, based on false assumptions, and has done more to confuse the issue than resolve it."

She then produced facts to prove this assertion.

Among them that "the EDC does not use taxpayers money. It raises its funds on world money markets and, in fact, because it is very selective in its loans, has actually made a profit each year since its inception."

Also, the "EDC financing is not a grant or a gift. It is a commercial loan, made in competition with other similar agencies operating in other countries, but at international commercial rates."

Exchange Programs Can be Worthwhile

By LUCY IZON

Exchange programs are often misinterpreted as cheap vacations and in some cases they can be. But for the most part they're developed with a specific purpose in mind and offer you a chance to visit and experience the lifestyle of someone else your own age, either nationally or internationally.

In any case there are a number of programs planned within the next year that you might consider, bearing in mind that most are reciprocal, that is, you must return the hospitality you receive.

The secretary of state's department has recently joined forces with the National Council of YMCAs to co-ordinate several domestic exchanges in a program known as Visions. In each of the three types of exchanges, accommodation, meals and travel are provided. All you pay is an initial fee of $50. All of the programs are open to Canadian citizens or landed immigrants, provided you meet the age requirement of the exchange you have chosen.

The first type of program they have is called the Canadian Small Groups Exchange. Groups from regions across Canada will be twinned with other small groups and spend a minimum of five days visiting their exchange group, then host them in turn. You can apply up to Oct. 1 for the program, which operates between Nov. 24 and Jan. 5. Then there will be one operating betweeen Feb. 2 and March 31. You have until Jan. 3 to apply. This Small Groups Exchange is open to anyone between 14 and 22 years. If you're interested you can contact your local YMCA or the national co-ordinator, Judy Blaney, 36 College St., Toronto, Ont. M5G 1K8.

The second program, known as Youth Dialogue on Canada's Future, will involve seminars at which participants will examine current Canadian issues and offfer solutions and recommendations. The seminar will be held in a number of major Canadian cities. You spend your first three days at the seminar and then four days getting to know the family your're staying with. Then it's your turn to host the person you have paired with in your home town.

Altogether these programs last 14 days, and each one will involve 30 local and 30 out-of-town participants. The age restrictions vary from seminar to seminar. Your local YMCA should be able to provide more information if you're interested or you can contact National Co-ordinator Cory Gibson, YMCA of Metropolitan Toronto, 36 College St., Toronto.

Visions is also operating a Canadian Northern-Southern exchange. How far North? Well, the application forms come in English, French and Inuit. Through local YMCAs they hope to recruit at least 200 people for the exchange in August. The plans are to twin participants from 6 to 10 northern communities with 6 to 10 southern cities. In each case a participant will spend 10 days visiting and 10 days hosting.

If you have something more exotic in mind such as exchanging with someone from a differeent area of the world, you can check Canada World Youth (CWY). It was set up in 1972 to co-ordinate international exchanges and is subsidized for the most part by the Canadian International Development Agency, which allows for participant's food, accommodation, transportation and emergency medical expenses to be fully covered. You're not paid if you work on one of these programs but you will receive a dollar a day pocket money and you could in some cases wind up with and extra school credit for the second language you've learned.

If you're selected you will work in a project group of 16, half Canadian and half from the country that you have been matched with. Each group project leader is between the ages of 23 and 35. Anyone who does participate must be prepared to devote eight months. You start off with three weeks of orientation with your partners here in Canada. Then the groups move out to work in Canadian communities.

There are two starting dates a year, July and September. However, applications are accepted year round. If you want to know more you can either contact one of the regional offices or take a look at a book called The World is Round by Jacques Hebert, who founded the CWY. Published by McLelland and Stewart, it covers a number of CWY exchanges in the past and records the participants' feelings and experiences.

Although there is no exchange involved with the Earthwatch project, it does open up a unique opportunity for travel. Through it anyone over the age of 16 can volunteer to become a member of a scientific expedition. In some cases students can even earn academic credit for participating.

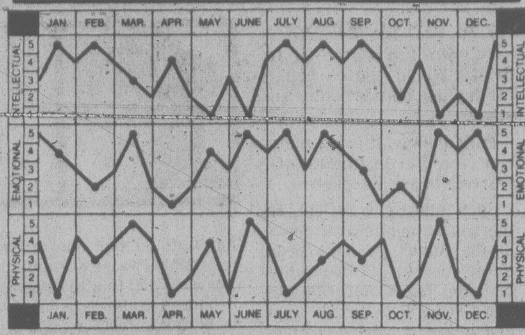
During the next year there will be 62 projects operating in 25 countries so it seems possible to pursue almost any interest. You could join a diving expeditiin off the coast of Plymouth, England, where they're searching for wrecked ships from the Spanish Armada. In Wyoming a cave expedition is seeking the bones of various creatures 10,000 to 20,000 years old at the bottom of a pit.

The expeditions run two weeks to a month and the cost $490 to $950, plus air-fare. That's a hefty jump from the price of an exchange but there is a way around it for some young people. Each year scholarships are granted to 100 applicants between the ages of 16 and 23 years. These scholarships are available to any nationality and will cover the cost of the field expedition or up to $500 if you're joining a project abroad. Applications are received for the scholarship program until March 31 each year.

General information is available for all the programs by writing Earthwatch, Box 127C, Belmont, Mass. 02178. Speecific information on scholarships is available by contacting the education department at the same address.

Bio-dex Sept. 2/78 By Ken J. Michaels Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978 Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	With your Bio-dex so low, spend time today with others. Don't try to win new friends through gift giving.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	A day to keep your thoughts to yourself and not expose your true feelings. Don't talk too much.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	You are finally in a great position to accomplish that long-standing goal. Listen to hidden messages.

Sometimes I take biorhythms for granted — assuming that everyone knows about them. If you're a new reader of Bio-dex you may find some of the terms a bit puzzling. When any of your graphs are low (around 1 point) you're at a critical stage and should take things easy. Two or 3 points on any graph is the neutral level and your day could go either way. Your positive cycle is reached at 4 or 5 points, and this means you're heading for a successful day.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am a 13-year-old boy and I have a problem. I am in a high school (in Grade 9) where an awful lot of the kids smoke. Both my parents smoke and so do my grandparents. A lot of my aunts and uncles smoke, but this has never influenced me to start smoking.

Last year, I was aware that a lot of non-smoking kids would be influenced to start smoking because of social strains. I found this to be true, because a lot of my non-smoking friends started to smoke.

However, I didn't. I found that I had enough willpower not to take a puff.

This year I am in a different school (again with a lot of smokers) but up until last week I had rejected every thought of ever smoking. But all of a sudden last week I just took a puff of my friend's cigarette. To my utter disgust, I liked it. The next day I had a whole cigarette. I again liked it. Then I became angry and terrified.

It finally hit me that I was starting to smoke. Since then I have been having the occasional puff.

I like smoking (because I think it makes me look cool) but I am scared and terrified to start. I don't want to smoke. I really don't. But I can't stop myself. What can I do? Who can I see?

Is there a social group for people like myself? One thing you must know. I really don't want to start smoking. Please help me.

ANSWER: I hope that you will find the strength within yourself to prevent yourself from doing something that you don't want to do, and that is not to smoke. I know there may be social pressures on you. You may feel that you will look "cool" smoking, but try to keep your mind focussed on the fact that you don't want to smoke.

There are no benefits from smoking. It is injurious to your health, and anyone that is encouraging you to smoke is being hostile to you by encouraging you to do something destructive. I hope that you will talk with your parents also, as they may be able to give you a lot of support to help resist tobacco.

With the present knowledge that exists about smoking, I feel that a person, such as yourself, makes an intelligent decision when they decide that they will not smoke.

If you telephoned the public health department, it may be able to put you in touch with courses about smoking, or groups of people who are trying not to smoke. It could be a good idea for your class to have someone come and talk about smoking. It may help discourage others from wanting to take that first puff. I hope you succeed.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I had a boyfriend and I went out with him for a year and three months and I still love him. Now he is going out with girls who sleep with everyone. I am still concerned about him. What can I do to help him?

ANSWER: First of all find out if he wants any help. He may be enjoying the company of the girls he is dating — and do not be so quick to judge what he is doing on his dates. Perhaps he is sleeping with these girls, but since he no longer is your boyfriend you will have to stay out of his affairs and let him make his own decisions.

It is true people are judged by the company they keep. We cannot intrude our morals on our friends too far. It is difficult to know whether your concern is a sign of your jealousy, but this may be a part of your worry. If you want to stay friends learn to mind your own business.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I feel the need to get out of the house next year because of terrible family relations — it's been hinted that I will be kicked out anyway. I hate living here and have thought of killing myself.

I want to try to live on my own. Are there any rooming houses or something where kids can live safely and inexpensively? I don't want to go straight out into the world and I think I need a stepping stone to set me in the right direction.

I am nearly 17 years old and very responsible.

ANSWER: You sound responsible and sensible, too.

If you are near a city, try to locate the YMCA, YWCA, YMHA, etc. That will be a place for the time being for you to live.

Whether or not you are going on with full-time schooling, go to see the principal or guidance teacher of your school who will put you in touch with the welfare department. If you qualify you can get welfare to continue school and live away from home.

You sound as though you are writing from a smaller town. In such a case it might be difficult to plan to get away from home without word getting to your parents.

You can write to me, care of this column, giving your name and address, and the address of a friend who will take your mail for you, or the address of your school, which could receive mail for you.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I'm 28 and my husband is 33. We've been married for six years and our life would be beautiful if it weren't for his jealousy, which is so intense it borders on insanity.

He has tried everything from psychiatry to prayer meetings, but nothing has helped.

I have never given him any cause to doubt me, but for some reason he doesn't trust me out of his sight. The only thing I can think of that would give him complete peace of mind is a chastity belt.

Will you please tell me where I can get one? I know they haven't been used since the Middle Ages, but there must be one around somewhere. Or perhaps someone who works in metals could make one for me. Whatever the price, it will be worth it.

Please rush your answer to me. This is no joke.—SYLVIA

DEAR SYLVIA: The only chastity belts I have ever seen are in museums. But if there are any around for sale, or if I hear of a metalsmith who is willing to fashion one for you. I'll let you know.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and overweight, but everyone tells me I have a pretty face. I've had only two dates in my life, and you just can't imagine how much I'd like to have a boyfriend.

One night at a school hop one of the most popular boys in school took an interest in me. I was in heaven. He offered to take me home and we parked on the way and he kissed me. It was wonderful. We kissed a lot, and finally I got scared and made him stop.

He said he wanted to see me again, but next time he didn't intend to stop at a kiss. He told me to get wise, that any fat girl can be popular if she will go all the way. I was shocked and asked him to take me right home.

He told me to think it over and call him when I changed my mind. That was two months ago, and I have been thinking it over. I don't want to be a bad girl, but I want a boyfriend. Should I pay the price?—FAT AND LONELY

DEAR FAT: The price might be more than you're prepared to pay. That boy wants to use you. "Fat girls can be popular," he says, "if they will go all the way."

Brilliant! So can THIN girls, with the kind of boys who use girls, and then go on to fresher game.

He is not for you. And neither is any boy who feeds you that kind of line.

(P.S. Please look into Overeaters Anonymous. They're terrific for girls with your problem.)

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Five years ago my cousin, who is 57, suffered a heart attack. He recovered very well and returned to work in six months. At first it was thought that he might need open heart surgery. Then it was found that one small artery in the heart was closed and had rerouted itself so he didn't need the operation. Several months ago he was stricken with a slight stroke. My question: How are these two related? I was always under the impression that if you had one you couldn't have the other. — Mrs. M. B.

Dear Mrs. B.:

There is a relationship between the two. Narrowing of the blood vessels to the heart and in the heart muscle itself may be caused by arteriosclerosis. If this does exist in these blood vessels it can also be present in the blood vessels that lead to and are in the brain.

There is by no means any fixed rule that says a heart attack means that a stroke is not possible. It is for this reason that when arteriosclerosis is definitely diagnosed at an early age (and 57 is an early age), the underlying causes must be sought and eliminated when possible.

Excess tobacco, high fat and high cholesterol diet, high blood pressure, diabetes, marked obesity, and little or no exercise can all be contributing factors.

The doctor told my brother that he has a toxic thyroid. Is there any special treatment for this and will he ever recover from it — Mrs. C. I. R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

A toxic thyroid, sometimes known as Graves' disease, is a condition in which there is excessive manufacture of the thyroid hormone. Those who suffer from this disease often give evidence of weakness, sweating, restlessness, weight loss, palpitation and sensitivity to heat. Sometimes, along with the overactive thyroid, changes in the appearance of the eyes may be present. In fact, bulging eyes quickly lead the doctor to investigate the thyroid as a possible cause.

Laboratory tests such as radio-iodine uptake and T3 and T4 help to confirm the diagnosis of toxic thyroid.

Treatment is very effective in most instances. A wide range of drugs is now available to help suppress the excess hormone production in the thyroid gland. Sometimes radioactive-iodine is used. In other cases partial removal of the thyroid gland by surgery is the method of choice.

One cannot prognosticate how quickly a patient will respond to these methods of treatment. The advances made in the past 25 years in the treatment of hyper-thyroidism or toxic thyroiditis have been quite remarkable.

Make Sure Bottled Water Safe

caveat emptor

By LYNN GORDON

Is your tap water fit to drink? Would you be better off buying bottled water instead?

Surprisingly, this is a question many consumers are starting to ask themselves.

Such questions reflect an increasing public awareness of the things we have been doing to our environment over the years. According to news stories we've all seen and heard, a variety of poisons continue to pour into our waters from factories, mills, mines, highways and even homes and gardens.

As well, many pollutants are being carried in the air, in some cases for over 1,000 miles, getting dumped as acid rain into our lakes and rivers.

The chemicals being talked about include PCBs, Mirex, lead, mercury, arsenic and other potentially lethal substances.

Even the chlorine that's added to our water supply has become a real source of concern, because it combines with other substances in water to form chloroform, a compound that's been found capable of causing cancer — and for which government standards are now being set up to make sure this substance stays within acceptable levels.

Is bottled water a valid alternative to tap water? What about water purifiers? These are some of the questions consumers are asking.

Is bottled spring or mineral water any safer or better than water straight from your tap?

Most experts will tell you that Canada has one of the best public water systems in the world and that the quality of bottled water is generally no better or worse than tap water.

The same experts concede that bottled spring and mineral water is unlikely to contain any chlorine compounds such as chloroform, which have been known to appear in tap water.

On the other hand, they point out that chlorine in the public water supply is necessary to kill harmful bacteria such as the kind that used to cause typhoid in the days before chlorination.

Scientists are now starting to weigh the trade-offs between chlorine's beneficial effects in preventing disease on the one hand and its potentially lethal side effects in creating chloride compounds such as chloroform on the other. Among the alternatives that have been suggested are ultraviolet light, or possibly an expensive activated carbon technique that traps and contains contaminants.

Meanwhile, the experts note that the mineral water you buy in a bottle may in some cases contain certain chemicals in an amount higher than in tap water. In a municipal water supply, there are standards set for potentially poisonous minerals such as arsenic. Details on standards are available from your provincial ministry of health. In some bottled mineral waters the arsenic level may be higher than permitted in tap water, although it still has to be low enough to meet federal import standards for this product, and is therefore not assumed to pose a health risk.

One point to remember about tap water is that it can dissolve minerals such as lead or copper from the water pipes in your building. Because of this it's advisable to let the tap run several minutes in the morning or after a long period of non-use, before you drink it. Also, use cold water for cooking or making tea, since hot water from the tap tends to have a higher metal content than cold water.

What about bottled distilled water?

Many people find it unpalatable because of its flat taste. Some experts believe that the minerals in water in its natural state are necessary for good health; distilled water has most of these minerals taken out of it. However, there is some controversy among scientists over exactly what effects 'soft' water, including the distilled variety, has on health.

Questions have been raised about the effects of chlorine added to public drinking water. What about the effects of other chemicals, namely flourides?

Several years ago, some American studies seemed to show a link between fluoridation of public water supplies and cancer. Fluoridation in the Netherlands was concelled in 1976 as a result. But more recent investigations around the world appear to have refuted this alleged connection.

It's interesting to note that where tap water is fluoridated, it's at the level of one part per million (ppm). Some (not all) bottled mineral water has a fluoride content that's actually higher than this level. At 1 ppm., fluorides prevent tooth decay. However, a higher concentration can result in mottled teeth. The fluoride level in at least one brand of mineral water has been found to be high enough to discolor teeth and lead to poor dental health if consumed regularly over a long period.

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Keep the Birds Humming

In the following article, Mother Earth reader Jud Baker explains how to construct your own hummingbird feeders.

You don't have to go out and spend good money on ready-made hummingbird feeders. I know how you can make feeders from recycled materials for next to nothing. And the finished product is guaranteed to satisfy even the most finicky hummer.

The secret of my feeders' simplicity and low cost is the ordinary 20-dram prescription vial. If you don't have some of these around home, you can pick them up at the drugstore for 3 to 5 cents each.

To make a feeder, you'll need an untinted vial with a tight-fitting cap, some transparent tape and a few feet of heavy thread or thin wire. You'll also need an ice pick or some other sharp, pointed metal object.

Start by heating the ice pick nearly red-hot and punching a pair of holes on opposite sides of the vial near its open end. Make sure the holes are very close to — but not covered up by — the bottom of the cap when it is in place, and small enough to keep insects out and liquid in.

Now take a couple of feet of thread or wire and secure the ends to the vial's sides with tape. For extra holding power, fold the ends of the thread back over the tape and wrap a second piece of tape around the tube.

That's basically all there is to it. Depending on how elaborate you want to get, you can fabricate just one or two of the feeders to hang up in the back yard, or you can assemble a number into a mobile. I've found that the mobile design makes for the most interesting bird watching.

To fill one of the finished feeders, just take the cap off and hold the vial upright. "Top it off" with nectar, cap the container tightly and quickly invert the tube (so the feeder's "dribble holes" are at the bottom). A small amount of liquid may leak out of the holes initially, but the leakage will stop as a vacuum is created inside the vial.

When it comes to making syrup for your tiny friends, you have two choices: Buy a commercial nectar mix or make up your own sugar solution. (Incidentally, honey is not recommended as a syrup base. Tests have shown that a diet of straight honey can be weakening — or even fatal — to hummingbirds.)

Since the first route is so expensive, the obvious choice is to make your own juice. To do this, stir four or five heaping teaspoons of granulated sugar into a cup of water along with enough red food coloring (vegetable dye) to give the mixture a definite scarlet hue. The color is very important because hummingbirds have no sense of smell and are attracted to nectar-bearing flowers and feeders by color alone.

It's generally a good idea to hang your feeder where it won't be exposed to direct sunlight, since sugar solutions can ferment and sunlight can speed up this process. Also, try to avoid placing the feeder where it will be shaken by wind or tree limb motion.

If, like me, you enjoy watching hummingbirds close up, you'll really love your new feeders. They'll bring the birds within easy viewing distance, and you'll be able to hear the "music" the tiny birds make.

Give prescription-tube hummingbird feeders a try. You'll never buy an expensive, store-bought nectar dispenser again.

Red Weapons 'Pack a Greater Punch'

LONDON (UPI) — The United States could fire more than twice as many nuclear warheads as the Soviets in case of war but Russia's atomic weapons pack a greater punch, the International Institute for Strategic Studies said today.

The Institute, an independent international centre for information and research on problems of security, defence and control in the nuclear age, also said the military balance in Europe is "moving steadily against the West."

The observations were part of the agency's annual "military balance" survey.

The Institute said the United States could launch more than 11,000 warheads — compared with 4,500 the Soviets could fire against the United States.

But the Soviet total will soar to more than 7,500 in the early 1980s and "its individual warheads have significantly higher yields than U.S. ones," the Institute said.

The agency said that as far as ground forces go in Europe, the Communists have a much greater number of troops, tanks and guns than do North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces and that NATO superiority in quality of weapons is diminishing.

"The advent of new weapons systems, "particularly precision guided munitions and new antitank and air defense missiles, may again cut into the Warsaw Pact's advantage in tank and aircraft numbers, but in general the pattern is one of a military balance moving steadily against the West," the report said.

Noting that NATO at its summit meeting in Washington in May produced a long term defense program designed to offset this Soviet superiority in numbers, the Institute said it is too early to say whether it will be effective.

Both the sides, strictly limited by the 1974 Vladivostok agreement, are modernizing rather than increasing the size of their nuclear arsenals, the Institute said.

Saturn Arrival Year Away

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (Reuter) — The U.S. Pioneer XI spacecraft, which has been in space for more than six years, was given a date today for arriving in the area of the planet Saturn — Sept. 1, 1979.

Scientists at the NASA centre here set the date at one year from today after making fresh calculations of the flight.

Pioneer XI now is 269 million kilometres (168 million miles) from Saturn and 1.3 billion kilometres (795 million miles) from earth and was given a push when it went by Jupiter.

Scientists hope the spacecraft, now well beyond its expected lifetime, will be able to provide information on the whitish-grey rings, which some scientists believe are made of ice and rock, around Saturn and any radiation belts in the area.

A NASA spokesman said most of the scientific equipment on Pioneer XI, including cameras, still is functioning.

Bikini Evacuation Sparks New Seeds of Bitterness

KWAJALEIN, Marshall Islands (UPI) — The rushed evacuation of the radioactive island of Bikini has sown new seeds of bitterness in the hearts of its people.

They were ordered off Bikini Thursday after scientists found it still unsafe for habitation 32 years after it was used for atomic tests.

They were evacuated to Kili Island, 500 miles away, and, on a shopping stopover at the U.S. missile base at Kwajalein, some of the 139 Bikinians talked about the hurried farewell.

"There are some things we didn't feel good about," said Taro Lokebal, who was born on Bikini and serves as liaison between the Council of Bikinians and the United States.

"The high commissioner made the people rush and work too hard. Some things were left behind — pigs, chicken, lumber.

"And yesterday it rained. We had to have our ceremony on the ship. It was supposed to be on the shore but we had no time."

Aboard the U.S. Trust Territory vessel MS Micro-Pilot, Lokebal said, the people sang hymns and prayed while the older ones, who recalled another farewell in 1946, wept.

"The pastor said Bikini atoll was our home given by God. In some way, the American people came and took it from us to improve their testing to be the world's security from our enemy.

"So we, the people of Bikini, are not too worried about our home. Because one of these days God will return it to us."

Scientists estimate Bikini will not be safe for at least 30 to 60 years because of the levels of cesium 137 and strontium 90 in the ground, food and water.

And some islanders fear the United States may want them off the atoll so Bikini can once again become a U.S. strategic-weapons testing site.

"They scared. They scared of U.S.," said Bear Lanje in broken English. Lanje worked 10 years on the island in the recently aborted cleanup and resettlement program that brought Bikinians back to the atoll in 1968.

Islanders were given $100.72 to make purchases on Kwajalein before resettlement on Kili, where many of them lived during the years of testing.

They complained the "high island" and its rough surf were unsuited to their life style of the lagoon and that they were left near starving and not reimbursed for Bikini property — some of it was blown up.

As a last resort, the Bikinians say, they want to be moved to government land in the United States itself, possibly in Hawaii.

NIXON STILL PLANNING AUSSIE TRIP

SAN CLEMENTE (AP) — Despite Australia's warning that a visit would be inopportune, Richard Nixon is reported today to be planning to stop there on his forthcoming world trip.

The San Diego Union quotes a Nixon spokesman as saying the former U.S. president would visit Australia because "scores of Australian citizens" have asked him to.

The spokesman said Nixon "fully understands he will not be able to see Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser. President Nixon has had great respect for the Australian people since the Second World War when he served with Australian military units."

DANES ON STRIKE

COPENHAGEN (Reuter) — Denmark's major daily newspapers failed to appear, mail was delayed and garbage cans went unemptied today as industrial action grew in protest against the economic policies of the country's two-day-old coalition cabinet.

Workers, mainly in the heavy engineering industry, went on strike Thursday after the Social Democratic-Liberal government proposed a five-month prices and profits freeze and a two-per-cent increase in the sales tax which would raise the tax to 20 per cent.

Printing workers at the main newspapers decided to join the heavy engineering strikers Thursday night. Today post office workers in some Copenhagen districts declared a 24-hour strike and garbagemen halted collection services for the day.

More strikes were expected and several unions have announced a protest march on the parliament building later today to underline their rejection of the new government which is the broadest based cabinet in Denmark since the 1960s. It controls 88 seats in the 179-seat assembly.

Reporter Freed After 18 Months

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Joe Thloloe, former president of the banned South African Union of Black Journalists, has been released from detention after 18 months, the Post newspaper reported today.

There was no immediate comment from security police.

"Many times I dreamt I had been released and then woke up to find I was still in prison," Thloloe told the Post. "This time I had to pinch myself several times to make sure I was not dreaming."

"I was awoken at 3:30 a.m. yesterday (Thursday) morning and told to pack. When I arrived at the Bethal Prison I was told by a police officer that the attorney-general had issued a warrant for my release," he added.

Thloloe, a senior reporter on the now banned World newspaper, was detained at his home in the black township of Soweto on March 1, 1977, under Section Six of the South African Terrorism Act. Section Six allows for a person to be held incommunicado, indefinitely without trial.

Thloloe was president of the UBJ, an organization banned in last October's government clampdown on black movements.

Seven other detainees also were released Thursday, but their identities had not yet been established, the Post added.

Fiery Cross Burned

BELMORE, Ohio (UPI) — A cross was burned early today near a tent city set-up in Belmore to house striking migrant workers who have been out of the tomato and cucumber fields in northwestern Ohio for seven days.

Ray Santiago, secretary-treasurer of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee, the group leading the strike, said the migrants had been harassed by farmers, but he didn't know who was responsible for the burning cross — a symbol normally associated with the Ku Klux Klan.

FLOC pulled workers out of the fields to dramatize demands for higher pay for the workers.

MD Survey Backs Saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of United States health professionals shows that more than 70 per cent of them oppose a ban on the artificial sweetener saccharin.

The survey, released on Thursday, is based on interviews with 517 physicians, dentists and dietitians.

It was sponsored by the Calorie Control Council, a group representing low-calorie food manufacturers and the soft drink industry, and was conducted by Market Facts Inc., a Chicago marketing research firm.

A council spokesman said this was the first countrywide survey of health professionals on banning saccharin.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration, citing studies linking saccharin with bladder cancer in male rats, last year proposed banning it. Congress delayed the ban until June, 1979, but required warning labels on saccharin products and authorized further studies.

Results of the new survey, which indicates that many health professionals think the benefits of saccharin may outweigh known human risks, have been given to the National Academy of Sciences, which is conducting a major study of saccharin for the government.

'Cannot Destroy Us . . .'

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — William and Emily Harris pleaded guilty to kidnapping Patricia Hearst, then made it clear they did so to insure their release from prison by 1983 and a "return to the streets."

"Within four and a half years, Bill and I will be back on the streets," Mrs. Harris said in an emotional statement to the court and spectators Thursday.

"We will return to the streets as people committed to change. They cannot destroy us."

Holding hands, the Harrises entered surprise guilty pleas on four charges in return for dismissal on nine other counts.

If convicted by a jury, they faced the possibility of life in prison with no chance of parole. Harris said the aim of the prosecution had been "to bury us alive."

Mrs. Harris, 31, her face pale and puffy from three years behind bars, fought back tears as she spoke in the Alameda County Courthouse, not far from the federal correctional institution at Pleasanton where Miss Hearst is serving time for armed robbery.

The Harrises had kept secret the surprise they planned for Thursday's court hearing — their admission for the first time that they were among the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers who burst into Miss Hearst's Berkeley apartment Feb. 4, 1974, and dragged her screaming into the night.

"Today we take full responsibility for our participation in the first political kidnapping in this country — the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst," Harris said as he faced spectators in the hushed courtroom.

Harris, 33, appeared to be fit. His voice was firm and controlled in contrast to his volatile courtroom outbursts earlier in the case.

"The plea does not mean we have feelings of remorse," Harris explained. "Instead, we feel pride in what these actions were able to accomplish."

"Patricia Hearst was kidnapped," Harris said. "She was not brainwashed, beaten, tortured or raped. She was not locked alone in a closet for days and weeks on end. She was not coerced into rejecting her family and remaining with the people who made up the SLA."

Harris added, "One of the most serious mistakes of the SLA was to let Patricia Hearst stay with us as an armed combatant."

Berlin Court For Hijacker?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States is likely to turn an East German hijacker over to a West Berlin court for trial partly because there is no U.S. court to take the case, informed sources said Thursday.

Detlev Alexander Tiede, the 32-year-old East German waiter who hijacked a Polish airliner, has been in the custody of U.S. military authorities since Wednesday when the plane landed at Tempelhof airport in the U.S. sector.

The sources said a formal decision is likely to be taken very shortly and that the weight of advice from U.S. legal experts in Washington and in West Germany is to turn Tiede over to West Berlin jurisdiction.

U.S. officials noted there is a legal basis for turning over the case. The Hague anti-hijacking convention, which West Germany has signed, extends to West Berlin by agreement of the three Western allies of the Second World War — the United States, Britain and France.

This requires that a hijacker either be put on trial by the governing authority in the place he lands or be extradited.

A second argument for turning the case over is that the United States has not had a military court in West Berlin since the late 1940s.

The jurisdictional question in the Tiede case is a "hot potato," one U.S. official said.

West German and West Berlin officials have made clear they would be happy if U.S. authorities tried the case, sources said.

SPEEDY ACTION URGED AGAINST RISING CHILD ABUSE

DENVER (UPI) — The dramatic increase of child neglect and abuse cases means the nation's cities will be required to take increased action to protect endangered children, a spokesman for the American Humane Association believes.

Larry Brown, director of child protection for the agency, said a recently completed study shows the need for more efforts to help youngsters across the country, particularly those living in crowded city areas.

Brown predicted reported cases of child neglect and abuse will increase to more than 1 million in 1978, up 100,000 over a year ago.

"Our latest analysis of reports from states participating in American Humane's National study on child neglect and abuse reporting indicates contributing factor to child neglect and abuse are directly related to high population density," Brown said.

"It seems to mean that American communities will have to do even more than they have done in the past to protect children and help families in trouble."

MP Loses Immunity

BONN (Reuter) — The Bundestag voted unanimously in five minutes today to lift the parliamentary immunity of a member accused in a major spy scandal.

The vote clears the way for a search of the offices of the MP.

Authoritative justice sources identified him, however, as 34-year-old Social Democratic Party MP Uwe Holtz, chairman of the Bundestag Development Aid Committee.

The latest spy scandal follows the defection to the West of a senior Romanian government official who disappeared from his Cologne hotel a month ago.

The official, Ion Pacepa, travelled from Germany to the United States where he is reported by newsmen here to have given the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency information alleging that there were highly placed Communist spies in West German government circles.

Holtz went on television Thursday night to deny that he had been guilty of anything which might be construed as espionage.

Parliament, which was not due to reconvene for more than two weeks, was asked to lift the MP's immunity by West German Chief Public Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann.

About 300 of the Bundestag's 496 deputies, including Holtz, were present for today's vote.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

One of three 17-year-olds charged Wednesday in Victoria provincial court with a break-in at the Medical Arts Building, 1105 Pandora, returned to court Thursday and was charged with two more break-ins.

William Clifford Scott, 1226 Rudlin, was charged Thursday with break-ins Tuesday at 1321 Rudlin and 1106 Balmoral. Scott, Thomas Allen Smart, 1241 Acton, and Scott Evan Starck, 860 Fisgard, were before Judge Blake Allan the previous day and charged with the break-in at the medical building Wednesday.

Scott was remanded again until today when all three teenagers are to return for election of their trial method and possible bail hearing.

Four youths, all 18, were jointly charged with taking a forklift from Westcan Terminals Ltd., 189 Dallas, earlier Thursday.

Garth Brent Caron of Calgary, Robert Mitchell Howden, 1810 Hollywood Crescent, Michael John Lesyk, 440 Stannard, and Henry Brent May, 126 Ladysmith, were released on their undertaking to appear and remanded until next Thursday for plea.

A 25-year-old Sooke man was fined $50 and had his ,22-calibre rifle forfeited after pleading guilty to possession of a prohibited weapon.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Dale Richard Scott, 2303 Sooke Road, was found with the rifle June 21 with the barrel sawn from 21 inches down to 10 inches.

Law said the incident arose when Scott reported a break-in to Colwood RCMP. When police arrived, they found the illegal weapon amongst Scott's gun collection.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Scott was trying to reconstruct the weapon and was seriously intending on becoming a gunsmith. He said Scott had even sold a weapon to a member of the Victoria crown counsel staff at one time.

Before levying the fine, Allan said the possession of guns was something he didn't favor and said "we'd all be better off without them."

Two men received 12-day jail terms after pleading guilty to driving while under suspension.

Martin Christopher Houghton, 18, of 386 Selica, was suspended by the motor vehicle branch on May 18, 1978, for an unsatisfactory driving record and Geoffrey Ross Baker, 19, of 815 Station, was suspended Nov. 16, 1977, for failure to pay a motor vehicle branch assessment.

Fined for drinking driving were: William David Urquhart, 2436 Keating Cross Road, $600; Kenneth Ross Gordon, 45, 2979 Austin, $500; and Josip Sajn, 43, of 4225 Thornhill Crescent, $500.

Private Fined In Pot Case

A Canadian Forces private was fined $1,000 and given a four-month suspended sentence Thursday by a CFB Esquimalt court martial for trafficking in marijuana.

Pte. Patrick David Cohoe of the fleet school had pleaded not guilty to three drug related charges.,

A military spokesman said Cohoe's trial was the last in a series involving drugs on the base.

Goodbye Victoria, Nanaimo

The counties of Victoria and Nanaimo will disappear today and the county of Vancouver Island will be used in all court proceedings.

Order-in-Council 2057 proclaimed the new, expanded county to replace the two counties which covered the island previously.

The order also did away with the counties of East Kootenay and West Kootenay and almalgated them into the county of Kootenay.

Four Bid for FM Licence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four local broadcasting firms are vying for a licence from the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) for a new FM station.

The station would be the eighth on the FM band here.

Selkirk Holdings, which owns CKWX; Jim Pattison Broadcasting, which owns CJOR; Chum Western, owners of CFUN; and Ralph Jacobson, of the the recently incorporated Canadian Family Radio Ltd., have filed applications with the CRTC.

A CRTC hearing has been scheduled here for Oct. 24.

Dalton Elton of CKWX said Selkirk Holdings is proposing a 24-hour jazz music station and a public affairs show. It would provide work for 20 full-time and 50 part-time employees, Elton said.

Pattison Broadcasting is applying for a 24-hour "middle-of-the-road current music" station including live music programs featuring local musicians. Pattison said it would hire 16 full-time and eight part-time employees.

Chum Western proposes a 24-hour "adult-contemporary" format.

Canadian Family Radio Ltd. wants to broadcast contemporary religious and secular music 18 hours a day, employing 10 full-time and up to six part-time workers.

All the stations are applying for 93.7 on the FM dial.

Two other local applications will also be heard by the CRTC Oct. 24.

Lundy Sanderson, head of British Columbia Institute of Technology's broadcast communications technology, said the institute is proposing a student-training station and some community and educational broadcasting at 107.9 on the FM dial, a small impaired station.

Ernie Mykyte of CJJC in the Fraser Valley community of Langley said he applied for an easy listening adult contemporary FM music station at the 94.5 wavelength which would provide work for nine full-time and 20 part-time employees.

UFAWU Officials Cleared

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) and four other union officials Wednesday were acquitted of charges they obstructed a hearing of the federal Restricted Trade Practices Commission in 1976.

However, provincial court Judge Douglas Hume found union members David MacIntosh and Kenneth Robinson guilty of impeding the closed-door hearing into the UFAWU by staying in the room after they were told to leave.

They will be sentenced Sept. 28. They can be jailed for up to two years and fined up to $5,000.

In acquitting union president Jack Nichol, Judge Hume, former president Homer Stevens and executives George Hewison, Bert Ogden and Walter Tickson, said while they may have made continuation of the hearing more difficult they stopped short of illegally impeding it. About 40 people had gathered outside hearing, demanding that it be made public.

Hewison said he will urge MacIntosh and Robinson to appeal their convictions.

Meanwhile, the union is more determined than ever to oppose any secret combines investigation, he said.

House Sale Finances for Billigoatus Man

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Ontario inventor is selling his home so he can afford to build the ultimate in milfoil weed eaters for the British Columbia government.

Now that the government has given him the green light, Errol Stewart says he will begin building a floating harvester designed to devour Eurasian milfoil infesting Okanagan lakes.

His invention — Aquanatus Billigoatus — won the $10,000 first prize last October in a weed-eating machine design contest sponsored by the government. The environment ministry has now told him to begin building the machine.

In a telephone interview from his home in Rockland, Ont., Stewart said he is moving to Victoria at the end of September to begin the project. Next May he hopes to have Billigoatus on the lakes for trials.

If the invention works, the government will give him $50,000 and the machine will be contracted to combat milfoil in B.C.

Stewart said his 22.8-metre mechanical harvester floats on pontoons and looks like a water spider.

"I guess it sounds strange, but the whole process is something like a rudimentary animal. It travels along the lake cutting and eating up the weeds. When the weeds have been dumped on board, hot water is used to kill and compact them.

Billigoatus, which can be assembled and operated by one man, gomes with a glass bottom, a periscope, a backhoe to clear objects out of its path, and two television cameras for viewing the lake bottom.

Stewart said it will harvest two to eight acres a day, depending on conditions, at a maximum depth of 7.6 metres.

"It can also dredge, build piers, and clear marinas," he said. "It can pull itself in and out of the water as well."

Stewart did not want to reveal the cost of building the machine because he is in competition with other designers. The design has been patented in both the U.S. and Canada.

Stewart is determined to have his machine operating in May before he runs out of money.

"I'm selling my house and laboratory for my working capital. I'm the one that's doing the gambling. But that's the way the free enterprise system works — isn't it?

The 38-year-old inventor said he held off on other projects to work on Billigoatus because the technology involved appealed to him.

Another invention of his was Cleanosaurus, a light dredge used to clean muck from the bottom of the Ottawa River. He now uses the dredged material as fuel and fertilizer.

A more imaginative creation was his Baby Troubles Monitor which can turn on a bottle warmer at the sound of crying, warn with a yellow light when diapers are wet and soothe babies with radio music.

Fund Lack, Death Link Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reports that two persons died and another was crippled because of a lack of funding to run a hyperbaric chamber at Vancouver General Hospital are false, the hospital's chief of surgery said Thursday.

Dr. Frank Patterson said the boy who lost his leg had it amputated despite hyberbaric treatment.

Dr. William Trapp, who has worked with the hyperbaric unit since 1965, said this week that two divers had died because the hyperbaric chamber was not available and that the boy's leg could have been saved by the $200,000 machine.

Patterson said Trapp was misinformed.

Although the chamber was shut down last November after a VGH engineering survey said it posed a fire hazard, the chamber was restarted to treat the youth, Patterson said.

"It was decided that the risk of a boy dying was greater than the risk of an accident," said Patterson.

However, the treatment did not halt the gangrene, he said.

Final Clearance Given $1.2B Revelstoke Dam

B.C. Hydro has received final approval to build the controversial $1.2 billion Revelstoke Dam.

H. D. DeBeck, provincial water rights comptroller, says in a letter to Labor Minister Allan Williams that a water licence, earlier issued to Hydro authorizing construction of a hydro-electric dam near Revelstoke, has been amended to incorporate the terms of the Cabinet Appeal Committee decision of June 23.

The letter was made public Thursday.

Williams is chairman of a special cabinet appeal committee which ruled Sept. 12, 1977, that the hydro-electric project could proceed with only minor changes made to the conditional water licence DeBeck granted Hydro in December, 1976.

The committee did not issue a final decision until last June pending negotiations between Hydro and Canadian Cellulose Ltd. which opposed the licence.

Also appealing the licence were the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Controls Society, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and West Kootenay Outdoorsmen.

The environmental protest groups had argued that the conditions of the original licence were inadequate for the protection of the environment or for the provision of satisfactory compensation for environmental loss and damage.

Williams said the committee, in responding to those objections, had given DeBeck greater powers and "made more definite responsibilities of Hydro," including the carrying out of programs for the protection of fish and wildlife habitat, the preparation of environmental guidelines for construction-related activities and provision of reservoir recreation facilities.

Canadian Cellulose objected to the loss of navigable water used to transport logs. The committee ruled that the issue should be settled by direct discussion between Hydro and CanCel.

The amended water licence requires "the construction and operation of facilities for transferring logs and log bundles from the Columbia River around the Revelstoke Dam."

DeBeck said the comptroller has been granted discretionary powers over the type of the log-handling facility and the cost of operating it.

He said both sides are "not too far from agreeing to the conditions that finally appeared in the licence, although both of them, I guess were a little bit upset."

He said the clauses concerning the settlement of claims for damages arising from construction and operation of the dam "have been extensively revised."

Under the amended clauses, any claims for damages under $10,000 will be submitted to a claims officer appointed by the comptroller who will decide without appeal whether the claim is valid and how much should be paid.

For claims over $10,000, the claimant may decide whether to take legal action against Hydro or to request arbitration under the Arbitration Act. If arbitration is selected, Hydro "as a term of this licence shall submit to such arbitration."

DeBeck said the conditional licence will remain in effect as long as Hydro uses the water according to the terms of the licence, and as long as it pays the annual fees required by the Water Act.

DeBeck estimated total fees would be $4 million to $5 million a year for rental of the water.

NINE TRUSTEES TWO TOO MANY?

NANAIMO (CP) — Trustees of the Nanaimo school district are considering asking the ministry of education to reduce the board's size by two trustees.

Trustees feel that changing the board to seven members from nine would save several thousand dollars in trustees' stipends and additional costs and that board decision-making processes would be streamlined.

Chairman Bill Holdom told a board meeting Thursday that the British Columbia School Trustees Association could not find any record of such a request.

Police Rapped In Death

NANAIMO (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Thursday that although the death of Dennis Maze, 41, of Gabriola Island, was accidental, RCMP were negligent for not getting medical attention for Maze after he twice requested it.

The jury of four men and two women recommended that medical requests from prisoners be documented by the desk sergeant and passed on to incoming shifts.

Neurologist Dr. N. A. Hutchison testified that Maze would not have lived even if taken directly to a hospital without a diagnosis, instead of to RCMP cells.

Pathologist Dr. Stanley Grant testified that Maze died July 16 because a blood clot caused his brain to shift to the top of his spinal column and caused respiratory arrest.

Maze was arrested on a bench warrant for an impaired driving charge after RCMP were called to a home where he was causing a disturbance.

Clark Speaks In Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark will visit Vancouver Sept. 5-6 for events including an address Tuesday to the Canadian Club, his office announced Thursday.

Clark is scheduled to attend a party function Tuesday evening and take part in a radio call-in show Wednesday with host John Reynolds, a former parliamentary colleague who left the Commons last year.

Charity Share Boost From Lottery Sales

RICHMOND (CP) — Charitable organizations selling Loto Canada tickets will benefit financially from a new compensation rate structure announced Thursday by Iona Campagnolo, federal fitness and amateur sport minister.

Non-profit groups will also be given the chance to operate the terminals for Loto Canada's new computerized lottery, to be introduced in November, she added at a news conference here.

Mrs. Campagnolo, the minister responsible for lotteries, said the new "competitive compensation rate" for charitable organizations will bring it in line with prevailing rates paid by provincial lotteries.

Loto Canada retailers now receive 4.5-per-cent commission for each ticket sold, compared with 10 per cent paid by the four Western provinces to retailers of The Provincial and Western Express lotteries tickets.

Under the new structure, non-profit organizations will get a federal subsidy, increasing their Loto Canada commission to 10 per cent.

Mrs. Campagnolo said the new rate structure would apply to both the present $10 ticket and the new $1 weekly Loto Select Game, starting in November and using computer terminals to allow customers to select their own game numbers.

Loto Canada has offered computer terminal operation licences to ticket-selling charitable organizations, she said.

Mrs. Campagnolo said the groups stand to benefit from this distribution plan since it is expected to provide them with an increase in over-all ticket sales and — with introduction of the new compensation program — the probability of a substantial increase in total profit.

"Dolly's not old enough to have her woman's intuition yet, is she, Mommy?"

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is the relatively rare day when one voluntarily arrives at a minor-suit game contract. The reason is a simple one: why try for an 11-trick game contract which, if fulfilled, will net the same pay that one secures for making nine tricks at notrump, or 10 tricks in hearts or spades? And, generally speaking, it is usually more difficult to make 11 tricks than it is to make 9 to 10.

But situations do develop where one reaches a minor-suit game contract voluntarily, via either good bidding or bad bidding. The latter was the case in todays deal which was poorly bid by South. But in the play he redeemed himself. The hand arose in a duplicate game.

East-West vulnerable.
East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
2♠	Pass	Pass	2 NT
Pass	4 ◇	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	5 ◇	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

It is my feeling that South should have bid three notrump over North's two-notrump call, rather than four diamonds. In this case, however, South turned out to be right: most North-South pairs arrived at three notrump, and went down via the following line of play:

West put up the spade ten on East's opening lead of a low spade, and North won the trick with the jack. The diamond ace was then played, felling East's jack, ater which a second diamond was led to South's ten. West declined to take his king, but was compelled to take it when a third diamond was led.

West's remaining spade was returned and won by East's ace. East continued with another spade, North king winning. East's three remaining spades were now established as winners; and when East obtained the lead with the club ace, he cashed them.

Against South's five-diamond contract East won the opening spade lead, cashed his club ace, and led a second club to dummy's queen. The South hand was then entered via the spade queen, and the diamond queen was played. West's king was trapped as East's jack fell. With the queen of diamonds winning the trick, another finesse was taken successfully against West's king. A third diamond lead now picked up West's king, after which declarer claimed his contract.

"Sounds like they're made of paper," Sarah commented. "Did you check them?"

"Sure. They were end of line." Her husband smiled. "At each price I got one hat more than that price in cents. Just nineteen bucks the lot."

Answer in the Refrigerator

The wish to have spring bulbs blooming indoors during winter months is a hangover for most of us who have lived in harsher climates or where skies are darker than here.

However, the desire for living flowers in advance of spring is understandable for all who live in apartments or condominiums far from ground level. But to raise even a few bulbs to flowering indoors presents a difficulty.

With a garden, a cold but frost-free shed, or a cold corner of an unheated basement, there is no trouble in getting the bulbs well rooted in the pots before they are brought into leaf growth and buds with the warmth of the home.

Without these conveniences (which are rapidly becoming obsolete in today's society) where can bulbs be put for a period of seven or eight weeks in a temperature constantly just around 4 deg. C?

In the vegetable crisper of the refrigerator, that's where. Without first-hand experience of indoor rooting bulbs, I have lately searched five books on indoor growing of plants by people who have no house or garden.

These were all up-to-date books of the 1970s to the current year. Apart from rooting the bulbs by putting them "into a cool place" apartment dwellers received only suggestions such as "a cool cupboard" or "storage room in basement of apartment block" where you live.

The last book I looked into came up with the vegetable crisper and this seems reasonable. In the past, nurserymen and other avid gardeners have used their home refrigerator for all kinds of unorthodox purposes such as stratifying seeds and storing seeds to maintain dormancy until wanted for sowing at a certain time of the year.

Two five-inch pots of daffodil bulbs can be stored fairly easily in one vegetable crisper. Since home refrigerators seem to be blessed with two crispers, this till leaves one for vegetables during the seven-or eight-week rooting period. No danger of freezing; always dark (cover with brown paper if desired, though scarcely needed unless you have a host of frig raiders in your home; and humidity is just right.

One five-inch pot holds one top-size daffodil bulb, or three good single-nose bulbs. Either gives a fine showing of flowers. Put an inch of drainage stones in the bottom then up to half the pot depth of mixed soil and sand.

Next set the bulbs on the soil so they do not touch the side of the pot. Fill in with more soil mixture, leaving an inch space at the surface for watering. Just the nose tip of the bulbs should be visible when the pot is tapped sharply on the table to settle the soil. Water with about half a drinking glass of water. Very little more will be needed during the period in the refrigerator.

Wash the pot outside, underneath and inside the rim before putting into the crisper.

Allowing about eight weeks for rooting, and six weeks for warm growing in the coolest window available, leaves and the colored bud stage should be reached around December 15.

If you have the available crisper (or even refrigerator shelf space) give this method a trial. You are likely to be rewarded with a potful of glowing spring flowers just when the need is greatest. The idea may be an old one to some of you, but new to others as it is to me. I shall try it by potting up a few bulbs during the coming week, and bragging about them in flower later.

Prized Temple Being Rebuilt

JAKARTA (AP) — Restoration of the north side of the eighth-century Borobudur temple in central Java, Indonesia's most prized national monument, has been completed, and work will start on the east side next month, the consultative committee announced.

Centuries of rain have undermined the foundations of the vast temple, bulging the lower walls outward, and algae and lichen have defaced the carved stones. The structure is being dismantled, stone by stone, and rebuilt.

Pollution Meeting Polluted

TORONTO (CP) — About 100 persons at a conference on air pollution were forced to leave Environment Canada's research centre Thursday when a container of toxic gas spilled.

Scientists and government officials were attending the NATO-sponsored conference when a 700-cubic-inch container of nitrous oxide, known as laughing gas, was accidentally knocked over in a research laboratory.

One technician was taken to hospital with burns to his hands.

Firemen evacuated the building and drew the gas outside with exhaust fans. The building was reopened after about one hour.

BAWLF
. . .never saw letter

Criticsm Blather - Bawlf

A charge that he put development considerations before his own wildlife branch in the recent decision to log a wilderness area in southeastern B.C. is "just a bunch of blather," Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said today.

The Sierra Club of B.C. claimed Thursday a mining company's letters thanking Bawlf and Forests Minister Tom Waterland for the "favorable decision" prove Bawlf represented the interests of the economic development ministry when the cabinet decided to allow selective logging in the Akamina-Kishenina area.

Bawlf said the letter from Crow's Nest Industries exists, but he has never seen it. The letter could be in the back mail or buried somewhere in his ministry but "I have no knowledge of such a letter.

"I've never met, talked to, heard of or from Crow's Nest before, during or after Akamina-Kishenina."

Bawlf said he presented a number of options on the preservation of the wilderness area to the Environment and Land-Use Committee — a committee comprising 10 cabinet ministers — and "we chose the one we thought best."

Logging of 1,900 acres of diseased trees to allow for new healthy growth will have little impact on the wilderness area which covers many thousands of acres, Bawlf said.

He pointed out that the local East Kootenay Fish and Game Association endorsed the proposal.

And although the Sierra Club still opposes any logging in the area, Bawlf said he is always interested in the club's positions and is willing to listen to them.

The Sierra Club is worried that recreational vehicles will use the logging roads and disturb the natural habitat of the wildlife.

$1M Can't Buy Everything

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Sodtka of Lowbanks, Ont., picked up the $1 million he won in a lottery and then learned Thursday that money does not buy everything — he was barred from a restaurant at a downtown hotel because he was not wearing a tie.

"It's the first time I've been turned down when I wanted something to eat," he said.

Sodtka, 37, a maintenance worker at a cotton mill in Welland, Ont., was in Toronto to pick up the $1-million cheque he won in the Provincial lottery draw Sunday.

Instead of eating lunch in the hotel's main dining room, he was directed to a more casual restaurant in the hotel where no tie was required.

When the Westbury Hotel manager later heard of the incident, he said:

"Oh, my gosh. It had to happen to us."

Sodtka's bank was not slow in responding to his good fortune.

Sodtka said he realized Wednesday evening that he won $1 million and his bank manager opened the bank before regular hours Thursday to allow Sodtka to arrange for investment.

Sodtka said he got the winning ticket as a birthday present July 11 from his sister Charlene.

He said he was not sure whether he would quit his job. "But the money isn't going to change me."

Sryrians, Palestinians Braced for Israeli Raid

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Syrian and Palestinian forces have been placed on full alert in expectation of a joint attack in Lebanon by Israel and right-wing Christian militias, a senior Palestinian source said today.

The source confirmed a report in the pro-Syrian leftist daily As Safir that Syrian and Palestinian forces in Lebanon had been put on alert.

The source said that rightist leader Camille Chamoun recently visited Israel secretly to coordinate the plan for a joint Israeli-Christian action.

"This is not an extraordinary move, in the current cirmcumstances," the source said. "We have information from foreign sources and high-ranking Arab diplomatic sources that Israel will try, in coordination with the Phalangists and Chamounists (right-wing Christian groups), to launch a big attack against Syrian and Palestinian forces.

"Therefore, our military people are at the ready, day or night."

In northern Lebanon, peacekeeping forces broke a two-day lull in fighting Thursday by attacking two villages in a search for Christian militiamen, reports from the region say.

The reports from the area 80 kilometres northeast of Beirut said three Christian militiamen were killed.

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told his senior staff Thursday that "creeping occupation" by the Syrian army in Lebanon could lead to the placement of Syrian missiles and Soviet advisers along Israel's border.

Dayan said the urgency of the situation in Lebanon, where Israeli-supported Christian militias have been under attack by the Syrians, will be conveyed to the "highest levels" of the U.S. government when the Israeli delegation to the Camp David summit arrives in the United States on Sunday.

In Cairo, the semi-official newspaper al-Ahram reported today Egypt will present a detailed peace plan for a comprehensive Middle East settlement at next week's summit meeting at Camp David.

The plan will be based on a six-point plan submitted at the July conference in Leeds, England, of the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers as well as U.S. state secretary, the newspaper said.

Sadat has asked his foreign ministry to make more studies to map out a detailed proposal, it said.

The six-point plan — rejected by Israel in England — proposed the return of the West Bank to Jordan and Gaza strip to Egyptian administration for a transitional period not to exceed five years. After that, Palestinians would be given the right to determine their own future.

In its editorial today, al-Ahram said the summit meeting at the U.S. presidential retreat would determine the fate of peace in the Middle East.

Meanwhile, Sadat today appeared to have won approval from one of Egypt's most powerful political figures for a new political party the president has chosen to lead.

Informed sources said Prime Minister Mamdouh Salem, 60, who has resigned from the leadership of the present ruling Arab Socialist party, said at a party meeting Sadat's new National Democratic party is "the ideal party for the country," the sources added.

$77,572 For Pool

The provincial government confirmed today it will contribute $77,572 towards renovation costs for the Crystal Pool.

The figure amounts to about one third of the total amount ($237,000) being spent by the city of Victoria and the province to refurbish the pool. A new swirl pool, weight room and two saunas have been added.

The revamped pool opened this afternoon after a four-month closure.

B.C. Fed Boss Raps Jobs Program Failure

Both the provincial and federal governments have deliberately avoided their responsibility to enact serious programs to put Canada and B.C. back to work, the president of the B.C. Federation of Labor charges.

In a prepared Labor Day message, George Johnston castigated the provincial and federal governments for their failure to initiate employment programs.

"This failure to act on unemployment isn't accidental," he said. "Both (Prime Minister) Trudeau and (Premier) Bennett know that to create new jobs for Canadians will require a substantial redirection of the economy, and that can only be accomplished through careful government planning."

But, he said, both leaders are loath to expand government intervention because it would not be in the best interests of big business.

"Our governments sit idle," Johnston said, "serving their corporate backers instead of the people who elect them."

Johnston said a major political issue the labor movement will have to tackle in the next year is to correct "the totally misleading campaign for so-called right-to-work legislation."

"Such laws don't attack unemployment at all, even though the name implies that they might guarantee workers the right to a job.

"The only purpose right-to-work laws would serve is to undermine the trade union movement and drive down wages and conditions."

Crisper Image Sought . . .

By MARIAN BURROS
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The potato chip industry is upset. After 125 years of decorating hamburger and tuna fish sandwich plates and filling children's tummies, the industry thinks its product has had a bad press.

So it plans to spend $200,000 this year to get those deep fried, heavily salted, crisp, thinly slicd pieces of potato, or facsimiles thereof, off the "junk food black list" and into more school lunch boxes, government-financed school lunch programs and school vending machines.

It is a "hard sell" campaign according to the public relations firm handling it, necessary because "increasing consumer awareness of nutrition is a potential problem for the industry...."

Ron Deutsch, head of the Potato Chip Information Bureau, claims to have enlisted the aid of an "expert advisory panel" of six nutritionists in order to "find credible ways to talk about chips...that won't result in a backlash of disbelief."

They may be too late. Several nutritionists have expressed amusement or dismay at the campaign.

Dr. John Hegsted, professor of nutrition at Harvard University and one of the authors of the Senate report Dietary Goals for the United States, asked about his role as an adviser, said: "As far as I know, there is no panel.

"We got together with Deutsch for two days and that was all.

"I am not on any advisory panel and I sure as hell am not interested in having them sell more potato chips, especially in schools."

Among the most drastic recommendations in Dietary Goals is the need for Americans to reduce substantially their consumption of both fat and salt. The biggest problem with potato chips, according to nutritionists, is their extremely high fat and salt content.

Deutsch chooses to downgrade the salt and fat questions in his paper, How Science Sees the Potato Chip, writing that on a per capita basis Americans get little salt or fat from chips.

According to Deutsch, Americans eat only .2 ounces of chips per day.

This figure would be accurate if the entire population, including infants, old people and those on low-salt diets ate potato chips, but realistically the bulk of potato chips are consumed by school children, teen-agers and young adults.

Dr. Ross Hume Hall, editor of a Canadian nutrition journal, Entropy Institute, believes potato chips could be called "fat chips" because the fat in them provides 60 per cent of their calories. He questions the validity of the statement made by Deutsch that "the frying of chips quickly seals in certain nutrients so that the potato slices retain more of certain vitamins, especially vitamin C."

Hall notes that "when the potato is first peeled and scrubbed with lye, the vitamin and mineral content of the skin and the layer of the potato next to it is lost."

Hall also asks, "If the vitamin content is retained (as the potato chips people claim), I wonder why the Roche company publishes ads implying that the potato chip is devoid of its original vitamins and should be fortified with Roche vitamins?"

Empty Couch Syndrome Worries MDs

TORONTO (UPI) — An increasing number of male psychotherapists are staring at empty couches as more women seek female therapists to help them sort out their problems, two psychologists said Thursday.

Aphrodite J. Clamar of New York told the American Psychological Association's annual convention the feminist movement has convinced many women that female therapists are "just as brainy, as well-trained and as able as men. They no longer feel the need to seek male authority figures for therapeutic protectiveness and expertise."

Ella Lasky, another New York psychologist, said women outnumber men three to one as patients, though three times as many men as women are therapists.

"Thus, if it should happen that most female patients decide to go to female therapists, the effect on our male colleagues could be catastrophic," she said.

The effects of the "empty couch syndrome" are already beginning to be felt, Ms. Lasky said, noting 50 per cent of incoming patients at two New York mental health clinics — including some males — now ask for female therapists.

Although there is no evidence to indicate the sex of the therapist makes any difference to the ultimate success or failure of the therapy, Ms. Clamar said there are "basic, important differences" between male and female therapists that "strongly affect women patients and their choice of therapists."

One such difference, she said, is that some male therapists — 4 per cent, according to one recent study — exploit women patients for their own sexual gratification.

Psychologist Herbert J. Freudenberger of New York said he currently treats six male therapists who admitted having sex with female patients.

Improved Profit Stressed Before FP Goes Public

TORONTO (CP) — The president of FP Publications Ltd. says improving profits is a necessary preliminary before the company goes public.

George Currie said the company now is financially strong with no long-term debt and only a small bank debt but "clearly we must improve our profits before such a step."

FP reported a profit of $12.9 million on revenues of $211 million last year but profitability throughout the chain is uneven and will not be improved overnight, Currie said in an interview.

The uneven profitability involves the weakened position of the Ottawa Journal because of a 16-month labor dispute, a current strike at Montreal Star and tough competitive battles for Calgary Albertan and Winnipeg Free Press.

Currie said that when he became president in April, he did so with the knowledge that he would be thrust into a business where labor problems are common.

"It's an unhappy part of this business. My instincts are to work harmoniously and co-operatively with representatives of labor and with employees."

When the electronic conversion of FP newspapers is completed later this year, "it would be a good time for us and for the newspaper industry to have a good look at its labor relations practices."

The former management consultant at Currie, Coopers and Lybrand Ltd., said it is hoped that newspaper unions will agree to meet management and try to reconcile long-standing differences.

He said the first interest of the company involves improving profits of existing operations rather than in beginning new ventures.

The company is not acquisition hungry and must reassess some of its existing assets if it intends to go public, he said.

The majority of FP shares are held by family trusts that wish to continue holding an interest in the company but want liquidity as well. The best way of achieving that compromise is to become a public company, he said.

The various major shareholders include R. Howard Webster, the Sifton family, the McConnell family and the Bell Foundation.

FB Publications now own 87 per cent of Sun Publishing Co. Ltd., Vancouver, and wholly owns the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times, Calgary Albertan, LethBridge Herald, Winnipeg Free Press, Ottawa Journal, Montreal Star and the Toronto Globe and Mail.

Its other interests include Montreal Standard (1973) Ltd. and minority holdings in Monarch Life Assurance Co. and Ronalds-Federated Ltd., the largest commercial printer in Canada.

Sniffing Out a Solution

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Authorities searched today for an elderly couple who drove off with two sticks of defused dynamite attached to their car by airport police who were training dogs to sniff out explosives attached to parked cars in the airport parking lot.

"We're using every scientific way we can think of to locate these people," said Leonard Griggs, airport director.

Griggs said the dynamite, about 2 pounds of raw gunpowder, did not have a detonator cap, electrical wires or a primer cap. It was highly unlikely the defused dynamite would explode, he said.

Airport police were conducting a training experiment with dogs trained to detect explosives when they stuck the dynamite on the bottom of the car, Griggs said.

When police turned to work on another car, an attendant drove the the couple's car off the lot, he said.

Eleven States Seek Mail Hike Freeze

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Eleven states, claiming first-class mail users are being overcharged "billions of dollars" to keep the financially ailing U.S. Postal Service in business, have asked a federal court to suspend new first-class rates which took effect earlier this year.

Maine Deputy Attorney General Donald G. Alexander said Thursday the suit was filed with the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington earlier this week on behalf of Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Arkansas, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Utah and Washington.

The states asked the court to suspend a May 19, 1978 order by the Postal Service's Board of Governors raising the postage on a first-class letter from 13 cents to 15 cents and instruct the Postal Service governors to set new rates.

Alexander said the Postal Service has until Oct. 2 to submit a written reply to the states' contentions and said oral arguments in the case should begin in November.

The suit, prepared by Maine and Massachusetts officials, charges the Postal Service has been illegally subsidizing its other services at the expense of first-class mail users, Alexander said.

The suit termed the new first-class rates "unreasonably discriminatory" and said they have cost consumers "billions of dollars."

"It should be Congress' burden to solve whatever fiscal difficulties the Postal Service has been able to avoid by relying upon revenue generated from improper first-class rates," the states said in a court brief filed with the suit.

Office Supply Graft Set at $24M a Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government may be receiving only one-half the $37.6 million in office supplies that it buys each year from Washington-area General Services Administration stores, a published report says.

The Washington Post quotes a government investigator as estimating that as much as one-half the money may be lost through corruption.

Government investigators are digging into allegations of widespread corruption in the GSA, the agency which builds and runs federal buildings and supplies government workers.

GSA Administrator Jay Solomon said earlier this week at least 50 indictments of GSA employees are expected.

Special investigator Vincent Alto, who was hired by Solomon, has estimated the government may have been shortchanged as much as $66 million in work or supplies paid for but never done.

A large sum may have come from supply stores in the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Delaware, The Post quotes unnamed investigators as saying.

The investigators said evidence of corruption has been uncovered at 27 of the 30 area stores which furnish government offices with supplies ranging from pencils and paper clips to briefcases and wastebaskets.

The investigators say they uncovered the discrepancies by comparing GSA documents certifying that goods had been delivered with internal records of the companies supposed to be supplying the goods.

The figures did not match at 27 stores and investigators say further digging turned up evidence that GSA employees had received gifts from supply firms involved.

Investigators said they have found evidence of the employees receiving television sets, vacation trips and cash in return for allowing private firms to be paid by GSA for supplies that were never delivered.

Pentacostal Cleric Led Human Sacrifces

NEUQUEN, Argentina (AP) — Indians sacrificed four members of their own tribe during rituals led by a Pentacostal preacher on a reservation in southern Argentina, police reported.

A 23-year-old woman and three small children were killed Aug. 22 because they were thought to be possessed by the devil, police said.

Several members of the tribe, including the preacher, are under arrest.

Cent-a-Dozen Cut In Egg Price Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government is investigating a one-cent-a-dozen reduction in egg prices ordered by a federally-appointed board, agriculture minister Jim Hewitt said Thursday.

The cross-Canada reduction on all grades was ordered almost two weeks ago by the National Farm Products Marketing Council, which oversees the activities of national marketing boards.

The reduction "is outside the specifications of the national egg cost-of-production formula and looks more political than anything else," B.C. Egg Marketing Board chairman Bob Blair said.

Producers were getting 78 cents for grade A extra large and large eggs.

Blair said, "it looks like our farmers will be put in a deficit position and will qualify for B.C. farm income assurance for the first time in almost two years."

Hewitt said he could see no reason for the decrease "when the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) has a tried and true formula that has been investigated and analyzed and found to be fair for both producers and consumers.

Neither he nor Blair could estimate the cost to the provincial government if this province's 201 egg producers are forced to collect farm income assurance.

Jim Campbell, manager of the B.C. Egg Board, said the reduction appears to have been caused by increased freight rates and was made to support interprovincial movement of eggs.

"What it means is that producers are being told to absorb the freight increases and naturally that helps exporting provinces to some degree but hurts B.C. which is self sufficient in egg production."

He said the B.C. Egg Board has already passed on the one-cent reduction to the marketplace but could not say whether it has been passed on to consumers by retail stores.

Rowers Close To Goal

SEATTLE (AP) — Two women rowing a wooden boat 1,920 kilometres from Seattle to Skagway, Alaska, report being happy, well-fed and a little sad their journey is almost over.

The Washington state women — Ginger Cox, 23, of Issaquah, and Tish Davis, 21, of Kirkland — said Wednesday they were at Juneau, Alaska, only 144 kilometres short of their goal.

"We're a little sad that the trip is almost over," Ms. Cox said in a telephone interview, "but Tish has to get back to school. Me, I think I may stay up here and live for a while."

The toughest part of the trip lies ahead, she said. "To get to Skagway, we'll have to row through Lynn Canal. That's where we expect the worst weather and water conditions. We could be delayed for days."

She said they have encountered excellent weather on their journey and "are falling in love with Alaska."

Both women rowed for the Dartmouth College women's crew team.

Their Norwegian-style, seven-metre boat has two sets of oars and the women row simultaneously.

They have kept their boat within seven to 10 kilometres of shore as they slowly row northward, averaging about 50 kilometres a day.

At night, the women sleep in a tent on shore, except on the few occasions they drifted into slumber on the boat.

Quebecers Picket In Burnaby

BURNABY (CP) — More than 500 employees of the Canadian Kenworth truck plant here walked off the job Thursday in support of a strike at the company's Quebec plant.

About 10 members of the United Auto Workers Union from Ste. Therese, Que., arrived here Thursday to set up a picket line.

The 500 Burnaby members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers (CAIMAW) agreed not to cross it.

$2,500 Grant For Homes Set

The B.C. housing ministry will begin accepting applications next week for the new $2,500 grant for first-time home purchasers.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Thursday he's received more than 7,000 inquiries since the Family First Home Program was introduced in the legislature in the spring.

To be eligible, the purchasers must be a family with at least one dependent child under the age of 19 buying their first home. Single parents and adoptive parents also qualify.

The grants, which can be taken as a monthly payment of $52.50 for five years rather than the lump sum of $2,500, will be retroactive to homes purchased after April 11.

The grants also cover mobile homes and condominiums.

Application forms are available at all government agents and the housing ministry's regional offices.

Car Buyer Pays Off With Gold

EDMONTON (CP) — A city car salesman says a man offered him about $4,500 worth of gold dust this week as payment for a new car.

"I've never seen that much gold dust before," said Art Thompson. "I've been in this business for 20 years and had watches and rings as down payments, but I've never seen anything like this."

The man, who asked to remain unidentified, traded in his car on a new $10,000 model and paid the difference in gold dust.

The anonymous prospector's poke, delivered in a coffee jar, weighed in at 21.67 ounces. Thomson said he took the dust to a local goldsmith who said there is no quick way of telling how pure the gold is. It would have to be refined at a smelter in Vancouver.

Doctors Earn the Most

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxation statistics released Thursday by Revenue Canada confirm what everyone already suspects — doctors and surgeons make more money than anyone else.

And for a second consecutive year, residents of the industrial communities of Oakville and Burlington in southern Ontario have the highest average incomes.

The information comes from the revenue department's "Green Book" of tax statistics, an annual publication, which this time gives a breakdown of average incomes, taxes and other information for the 1976 tax year.

It gives average incomes for 100 communities across the country.

Self-employed doctors and surgeons earned an average $49,310 in 1976 — tops for all occupational groups — which was an increase from $46,661 a year earlier. Next on the list were self-employed lawyers and notaries, with average incomes of $44,858, a rise from $42,731 in 1975.

Dentists earned an average $43,336 in 1976, compared with $40,871 in the preceding year.

Self-employed engineers and architects had a bad year in 1976. Their average incomes fell to $40,626 from $43,409 and they slipped from being second only to doctors in average incomes to fourth place.

The only apparent explanation is that there was a surplus of engineers and not as much work for them as in 1975. Some universities were advising engineering students to switch disciplines at that time.

Self-employed accountants earned an average of $36,616 in 1976, up from $34,668 in 1975.

According to Revenue Canada, all incomes went up by 14.6 per cent between 1975 and 1976. The average income in 1976 was $13,319.

Men did considerably better than women, with average incomes of $15,304 while women earned an average $9,479 in 1976. Men's incomes peaked when they were between 40 and 45 but in the case of women their average incomes were highest when they were 70 or older.

Oakville has a Ford Motor Co. plant, which helps explain its leading position in average incomes. Burlington is a suburb of the steel-making city of Hamilton.

Cool Rains Dampen Forest Threat

Cool, damp weather throughout most of British Columbia has greatly improved the forest fire situation in the province.

The B.C. forest service said in a news release Thursday that 53 fires are burning in the province, compared to 600 that were blazing throughout the province in the early days of August.

The service said only 14 new fires were reported during the past week, and the forest fire danger remains low to moderate in most regions of the province.

The number of fires to date this year is 2,208.

'STOP SPOON-FEEDING'

Gov't Aims to Slash UIC Claims by 10%

OTTAWA (CP) — In a move "to stop spoon-feeding," Employment Minister Bud Cullen today announced proposals that would reduce the number of unemployment insurance claimants by about 10 per cent after new rules took full effect.

Cullen coupled his proposal for major cost-cutting surgery on the unemployment insurance program with announcement of plans to spend $710 million on job creation in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

The Cullen proposals would require legislation to take effect and bills probably will be introduced in the fall session of Parliament unless it is dissolved for a general election.

Hardest hit by the proposed changes to the unemployment program would be young persons, those returning to the labor force after a long absence and repeating claimants.

Cullen could not give reporters an estimate of how many persons would be affected by the tighter rules, but an official from his department later said that by 1980-81 the changes would have the effect of disqualifying about 263,000 of the approximately 2½ million benefit claims that would normally be filed.

Cullen acknowledged at a news conference that young persons in particular would be affected by the unemployment insurance changes.

"But we have to stop the spoon-feeding aspect . . . to stop making it too easy for them."

Cullen said the increased job opportunities as a result of more government spending in that area "will counteract the negative impact" of unemployment insurance cuts.

The job-creation spending would create what he described as 113,000 work years of employment and involve 368,000 persons in jobs and training.

He said he could not give a detailed breakdown of what a work-year would involve in terms of numbers of jobs and the lengths of those jobs. That would depend, to some extent, on agreements with the provinces.

Cullen said the aim of tightening the unemployment insurance program, which he described as too generous, is to "increase incentives to work."

Proposed changes to the unemployment insurance program would result in savings of $580 million in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Cullen proposed increased entrance requirements for repeating claimants who have already received unemployment insurance benefits in the year before their latest claim and for new entrants to the work force.

The government also proposes to move toward "special recovery from high-income unemployment

$10M Postal Thefts Bared

MONTREAL (CP) — Police say investigations have begun in major Canadian cities to find out whether similar rings of thieves exist to one that has stolen up to $10 million in goods from the mails in Montreal during the last two years.

Two postal employees, a truck driver and a supervisor, arrested Thursday in connection with the ring were to be arraigned in sessions court today. The arrests followed an 18-month investigation and more are expected, although the size of the ring is not yet known, a police spokesman said.

A Post Office official said the two had been suspended pending the outcome of the charges.

Constable Norman Couillard, a Montreal police spokesman, said postal trucks had been robbed three or four times a month of cash, jewels, furs and expensive clothing, and estimated that each heist netted at least $200,000.

The thefts were made only from trucks containing valuable merchandise and never occurred twice in the same place.

In other cases, mailing addresses were changed and stolen goods loaded on particular trucks. A driver posing in an official uniform would drive the vehicle to a designated area and unload it, returning it empty to the postal station.

"We will never be able to determine with absolute precision the exact amount the members of this ring accumulated in a little more than two years," Couillard said. "The sum of $10 million is more than reasonable in this case."

A spokesman for the post office in Vancouver said there is no indication of any organized ring operating out of either the Vancouver or Victoria offices.

He was unable to say whether either centre figures in the Montreal-based investigation.

Jaunt by Judges Raising a Storm

VANCOUVER — Teachers were flown to Vancouver from Ottawa to teach English to a group of federal judges from Quebec according to the Vancouver Province.

A political storm is building over the judges' expenses-paid trip, but the federal justice department refuses to say why the course is being held in Vancouver, 3,152 miles (5,073 kilometres) from Quebec City.

The group includes about 25 judges and, with their wives and the teachers, the entire entourage numbers about 60 people.

There were calls Thursday for the resignation of the judges' spokesman, lawyer Roger Collette, who had told the Province that the taxpayers are paying for the 12-day course at the Bayshore Inn, but he wanted no publicity.

John Fraser, Conservative MP for Vancouver South, wants to raise the matter in the Commons. He said "Mr. Collette's position ought to be under serious consideration.

"His usefulness is extremely limited because of his remarkable attitude and his irresponsible statements."

Outraged members of the public called the Province, protesting Collette's remarks and demanding that he be fired.

A senior Ottawa civil servant said: "If Collette said those things, he's crazy."

Collette, who also is staying at the Bayshore, denied talking to the Province. He said Thursday that he has not decided yet whether to sue the Province for alleged libel.

Essentially the same comments which appeared in the Province Thursday appeared also in Thursday editions of The Sun.

Asked if he will resign, he said there is no reason why he should. But he refused to answer any further questions about the course and its cost.

The federal justice department is investigating the remarks attributed to Collette, who described himself as deputy commissioner for federal judicial affairs in Ottawa.

A senior aide to Justice Minister Otto Lang said that Collette, who organized the English course, is on contract to the judicial affairs department — but is not deputy commissioner.

The spokesman was unable to say how much the course, which ends today, will cost, but hopes to be able to find out by early next week.

He said Lang has been told about the situation.

"Mr. Lang wants to make it clear that all members of the public have a right to this information," said the aide.

Quebec Appeal Court Judge Andre Dube, one of the judges on the course, said in clear English: "It is an intensive course, and we are talking English as much as we can and are benefiting a lot. At least one-third of our cases are in English. I think the fuss is for nothing."

Judge Dube confirmed that there are about 25 judges on the course and that some of the English teachers had been flown to Vancouver from Ottawa and other parts of the country.

The judges are getting a special government rate at the hotel and, Judge Dube said, they are paying for meals out of their own pockets. He said they had flown to Vancouver on advance-purchase tickets, not first-class tickets.

Players One, PWA Zero

VERNON (CP) — A chartered Pacific Western Airlines 737 made an unscheduled flight to Kelowna from Calgary Thursday when 127 lacrosse players, officials and wives refused to get off the plane in Calgary.

The four teams, representing Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, were bound for the Canadian senior B lacrosse championship here.

The pilot and air crew expected everyone to disembark when the plane landed at Calgary but everyone stayed on board, a team official said.

Art Rattle, spokesman for the Ontario Lacrosse Association who was on the plane in Calgary, said: "We just stayed put and told them we weren't going to move. I think the air crew expected us to get off but we were told when we left Toronto that we were going to land in Kelowna."

Following a 40-minute meeting with PWA officials and a team official in Calgary, the plane refueled and took off for Kelowna landing at 4:40 a.m.

Munro Orders Talks

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Labor Minister John Munro today personally intervened in the Air Canada dispute.

He called on Air Canada president Claude Taylor and the negotiating team for the International Associations of Machinists to meet him Sunday morning at an Ottawa hotel.

The talks will last as long as there appears any possibility of reaching a settlement, a spokesman for Munro said.

Talks broke off indefinitely Thursday night between Air Canada and the union representing 7,500 locked-out ground-service workers following a clear victory within the union for supporters of a tough position and its rejection by the airline.

A brief meeting Thursday evening between the two sides ended abruptly when the airline, now in the eighth day of a shutdown, said it could not agree to demands by the International Association of Machinists that it withdraw three contentious clauses from a contract proposal.

Chief union negotiator Barry Shaw, who has faced several challenges from inside the union, appeared crestfallen at the turn of events.

In an apparent reproach to the 13-member negotiating team, the union's national executive board voted earlier to support demands for withdrawal of the three clauses. Some of the negotiators had said they would accept a compromise.

The two sides were close to agreement on most issues but became bogged down over the three clauses, dealing with longer disciplinary suspensions, job classification of cargo handlers, and travel time by employees on union business.

"We have just been advised by the union that unless the three items are withdrawn, there is no point in carrying on with the negotiations," chief Air Canada negotiator Norm Radford told reporters as he left the meeting only 25 minutes after it began.

"We are prepared to nego-

MP Guilty

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — Independent MP Gilbert Rondeau, found guilty Friday on charges of arson and conspiracy, has been ordered to appear in sessions court on Sept. 11 for sentencing.

Judge Denis Bouchard agreed to let Rondeau, who represents Shefford riding and is the first sitting MP to be convicted of an indictable offence since 1947, remain free until sentencing. The delay in sentencing was granted at the request of defence lawyer Paul Lesage.

Jacques Harbec testified Rondeau paid him $1,500 to set the fire.

Dollar Fails To Break 87¢

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar gained slightly on New York money markets Thursday, but failed to break above the 87 U.S. cent level.

In London, the U.S.dollar improved against the British pound and the Japanese yen today but the rate in other major European currencies slid some more.

Legal Pot Possession Urged by Bar

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association on Thursday became the last major body of laywers in North America to recommend modification of marijuana laws.

It passed a resolution recommending that the federal government decriminalize marijuana when owned or grown for personal adult use. The resolution also said that "the non-profit transfer of small amounts" between adult users should no longer be criminal.

Ted Seifred of Vancouver, who proposed the measure, said that last year 2,240 individuals went to jail for simple posession of marijuana and there were 37,862 convictions altogether — mostly for simple posession.

He said the American Bar Association favors decriminalization and the Canadian Medical Association in 1969 had said marijuana laws did more harm to users than marijuana itself.

"The only organization of doctors and lawyers in North America that has not come out for decriminalization is the Canadian Bar Association," Seifred said.

The resolution prompted some protest.

Bill Thompson of Peterborough, Ont., said the meeting will go down in history as the one that said "yes to pot, no to the Queen."

Bill Brown of St. John's Nfld., challenged Seifred's contention that medical criticisms of marijuana have mainly turned out to be myths.

"There must be some bad effects," said Brown, an older delegate. "Why were those 37,000 prosecuted? Are all the judges and prosecutors in this country crazy?"

His intervention was met with laughter from an audience mainly comprised of young lawyers.

"It isn't fitting for the Canadian Bar Association to encourage the use of marijuana," Brown said, adding that the only user he had ever known had stolen a car.

But Morris Manning of Toronto said that as a controlled substance under the Food and Drug Act, marijuana would still be subject to control.

'McGeer Has No Right To Judge'

Education Minister Pat McGeer has no right to judge teachers found guilty of marijuana offences but discharged by the courts, B.C. Teachers Federation president Pat Brady said today.

Court discharges should be upheld by school boards and the ministry, Brady said in an interview.

Brady, who said the BCTF does not condone the use of drugs, said McGeer's decision to revoke the licences of teachers found guilty in the future of marijuana offences puts them in "double jeopardy."

He also criticized McGeer's decision to review the granting of teaching certificates and to ask the person seeking a certificate whether he uses drugs.

"We see this as an invasion of privacy and a violation of the individual's civil liberties," he said.

Brady said teachers should only lose their jobs over drug charges if the courts convict and sentence them.

McGeer said Thursday he was disappointed with a decision by the Coquitlam school board to reinstate auto mechanics teacher Dennis Hilton, 29, after he was found guilty but granted a conditional discharge on a charge of possession of marijuana.

He said pot-smoking teachers will be removed from the school system because educators have an obligation to maintain high moral standards.

Coquitlam school board chairman Eunice Parker said she finds McGeer's criticism incredible. School boards have no alternative under the Public Schools Act but to reinstate a teacher who is found guilty of a marijuana offence but receives a conditional or absolute discharge, she said.

Smedley accused McGeer of using school trustees as a "scapegoat" at a politically opportune time when school boards are under fire for high budgets.

Old Timers Take on Malahat

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Antique car buffs all around the Pacific Northwest are preparing their steeds for the fourth annual Malahat Challenge on Saturday, Sept. 9.

Sponsored by the Victoria chapter of the Vintage Car Club of Canada and the B.C. Vintage Car Club, the "race" is restricted to cars built in 1915 or earlier.

Leaving Nanaimo at various times, the cars must finish in front of the Legislative Buildings by 4 p.m.

The Fred Bell Perpetual Trophy, named for the late Fred Bell of Nanaimo who initiated the first Malahat Challenge, goes to the oldest car finishing first, providing it has not won the race before.

At 9 p.m. that evening Victorians will be treated to another glimpse into the past as the antique cars carry out a gaslight parade around Beacon Hill Park.

One of the most interesting cars in the Malahat Challenge will be a 1911 Chalmers, belonging to Bruce McClung of 155 Goldfinch.

The clutch shattered shortly after the owner bought the car. Unable to make the repairs, the original owner kept it in storage for 63 years.

McClung says when he discovered the car it was "covered in dust and chicken dung" and one of five in a barn in eastern Washington.

Made by the Chalmers Motor Company of Detroit, the model originally sold for $1,500. It has a four-cycle engine and a top speed of 55 miles per hour. It's now valued at a ballpark figure of $20,000.

When McClung bought the car it had only 1,463 miles on the odometer.

He even has the original tools, spark plugs and owner's manual.

One of the most interesting features of the handsomely finished car is an explosive-type exhaust whistle.

McClung explains that in the old days drivers, when they came to an intersection, had to get out, look both ways and fire a gun to warn horse-drawn vehicles of their presence. If horses were in the area the car was to be taken into the bushes and camouflaged in case it panicked the horse. The exhaust whistle on the 1911 Chalmers wiped out the need for the driver to carry a gun.

One of the other five cars stored in the barn was an 1898 Black motor buggy, now owned by Bruce Hopkins of 187 Lohr Road.

Built by the Black Manufacturing Company of Chicago, the buggy still runs.

"It goes about four or five miles an hour," Hopkins says.

Its high wooden wheels, made of hickory, were designed so the car wouldn't get stuck in road ruts. Instead of a wheel, it's steered by a tiller.

Hopkins says the ancient buggy sold for $395. For extras, you could get a set of tires for $25, a steering wheel for between $10 and $12 and a top for another $10.

Too rickety to make the Nanaimo-Victoria run, the 1898 Black will remain in its shed on Sept. 9 while Hopkins makes the Malahat Challenge in another of his vintage cars — a 1914 White speedster, which he bought from the late Fred Bell.

Strange as it may seem, this model was made by the White Sewing Machine Company of Cleveland, Ohio.

Helped by Pat Hoole Jr., Hopkins has the speedster in good shape for the Sept. 9 testing. He was the first to finish in 1977 but the trophy went to an older car.

While many of the drivers and their passengers will dress in old-time rig, Hopkins says he'll wear coveralls and warm clothes because driving can become a chilly affair when you're exposed to the elements.

About 40 cars, one from Mount Shasta, Calif., are expected to take part in the Malahat Challenge, bringing colorful reminders of the past as they chug along the highway.

TOWN TALK

Brutus, Sealand's Stellar sea lion pup is dead but a successor may be on the way.

Brutus, born July 12 and the only Stellar to be born in captivity, was accidentally trampled by his 1,800-pound father Benjamin on Wednesday and an autopsy showed he died of internal injuries received from a blow on the neck.

Brutus usually spent the night sleeping on his father's back.

Tora, the mother, and Benjamin mated frequently after Brutus' birth and there's a reasonable chance that the 800-pound sea lion may be pregnant. The gestation period is 11 months, Sealand manager Angus Matthews says.

Matthews said Benjamin was despondent after Wednesday's accident, being lethargic and going off his food.

Most visitors to the Saanich Fair this weekend will be interested in the displays, and try and ignore the crowds.

But one who will be there specifically for the crowds will be Tory leader Joe Clark, meeting as many people as he can in preparation for the sometime election.

Clark will make a quick trip here from Vancouver, and be at the fairgrounds 2 - 5 p.m. Monday.

When Albino Luciani was elected Pope last month newspapers around the country scurried around trying to come up with new angles on the story.

The Campbell River Upper Islander was one of the few to get a local slant.

Pope John Paul, reported the paper, was a close relative of a Campbell River resident's late husband.

Amalia Tancon grew up in the same small northern Italian town as the new Pope and married one of his cousins. She last saw Luciani in 1973, on a visit to Italy, when the then future Pope was the Cardinal of Venice.

Tancon said she had lunch with him and they talked at length "about when he was young with my husband."

She says of Pope John Paul: "He is a simple person, very gentle."

Tancon also knew Luciani's mother, who died in 1948.

"She was a great person, that woman. His father was a socialist, and his mother tried really hard to make sure he never stopped their son from going into the priesthood. She worked hard at that."

The Anglican Bishop of B.C., Roy Gartrell, says one of the unforgettable impressions he brought back from the recent Lambeth Conference of Anglican bishops in Canterbury, England, was the unquenchable spirit of the 20-strong contingent of bishops from Uganda.

They played an active role in the three weeks of discussions, apparently undaunted by the knowledge that their every word and action was being recorded by three of Uganda dictator Idi Amin's secret police who were accredited to the conference as news media representatives.

"To witness their courage was a humbling experience," Gartrell recalls.

For the first time in its history the Naden band of CFB Esquimalt has women in its ranks.

The three women, recent graduates of the school of music at the base, are Pte. Robbie Hutchinson, who plays the oboe, Pte. Judy Reside, who plays the flute, and Pte. Connie Mayor, who plays the clarinet.

Other recent graduates to join the band are drummer Pte. Dave Smith and Pte. Jim Reside, alto saxophone.

SUDS DAY SATURDAY

British Columbia draught beer will be delivered to Victoria pubs Saturday morning and bottles will be on the way to liquor stores Tuesday.

"We will make British Columbia beer available as quickly as the breweries can get it to us," Liquor Distribution Branch spokesman Janet Willson said today.

"I understand draught beer is going to the licencees (beer parlors) Saturday and bottled beer will be available next week."

Most of the remaining cans of American beer are expected to be sold today and Saturday.

"We have a long weekend coming up and I suspect most of the American beer will be sold off," she said.

Some beer parlors have cut the price on U.S. brands to sell their remaining supplies.

In Victoria, a spokesman for Labatt Breweries of B.C. said beer brewed in May, before the strike-lockout, was removed from refrigeration today and was being bottled.

"Beer can keep indefinitely in refrigeration. After it is bottled, it is good for another 90 days at least and probably for four months or more."

Ticket Drawn On the Irish

The name on the ticket drawn in Saturday's Irish Sweepstake says Roxanne Simmons but the most excited person in Victoria is her father-in-law.

"He bought the ticket for me," Mrs. Simmons, of 5533 Adderley, said this morning.

"I was really surprised. He is always buying tickets for himself and for other people. I'm certainly going to split the prize with him."

At 954 Byng, T.W. Simmons was beside himself.

"I've been buying these things for years and years.

"Never had a holiday, you know. I'm 65 now and somehow we never had the money or the time to go for a real vacation.

"There are so many things I'd like to buy. But the main thing is to take a holiday, after all these years.

"I'm retired now. Was an adjuster in the legal department of B.C. Hydro."

If Cashmere King wins the race Saturday morning he and Roxanne would split $100,000. Second place would bring $40,000 and third $20,000.

"My ticket has been drawn twice before on the Irish but I only won the minimum prize both times. Maybe I'll be lucky the third time."

However, 3 a.m. is just too early for him to get up to listen to the race.

Roxanne Simmons says she and her husband will stay up to hear the race.

"I've never bought a lottery ticket and I don't think my husband has either. But my father-in-law buys them all the time. I hope we win, for his sake."

Police Nab Two In Cheque Heist

Victoria police have arrested two suspects in connection with the theft early Wednesday of 180 welfare cheques worth more than $70,000.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the city detectives division said a 17-year-old youth and a 16-year-old juvenile were picked up Thursday afternoon. Some of the cheques were recovered.

Stewart was unable to say whether any of the cheques, made out to clients of the Blanshard Street human resources office, had been cashed. However, there are indications two attempts had been made at downtown stores.

The pair has been charged with breaking and entering the welfare office and theft. Both are expected to appear in court later today.

The juvenile is also facing a charge of escaping custody.

Meanwhile, Saanich police have warned merchants throughout southwestern B.C. to be on the lookout for persons attempting to cash 350 cheques stolen from Saanich firms in July.

Police, who weren't made aware of the thefts until this week, said 150 blank cheques were stolen from a car in the Gorge Road area July 14 and 200 other cheques stolen from a residence about the same time.

The 150 cheques are drawn on the account of Lagah Installations of Victoria from the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union on Shelborne.

The others are drawn on the account of Trojan Movers from the Toronto Dominion Bank in Town and Country.

Saanich police fraud investigators Dave Bryan and Gary Downer said Thursday three of the Lagah cheques were cashed by a man in July at Victoria grocery stores in amounts of $75, $140 and $150.

Two Trojan cheques have also shown up cashed at grocery stores in Greater Victoria. Both were in amounts of about $325. The passer was a young woman accompanied by a man.

Downer said the owners of both companies didn't report the thefts until they learned some of the cheques had been cashed.

The Lagah cheques bear serial numbers of between 251 to 400 and are light blue.

The Torjan cheques are green. Some may have a protectograph stamped on them.

Five Days Left to Enter

Hampton Park Hustlers today issued challenges to Victoria teams to try to beat them in the Great Inner Tube Race.

"This challenge is aimed at the James Bay Athletic Association, the Esquimalt Oldies, the Tillicum Two-Spots and all the Slow-Pitch Fastball teams in the district as well as the Cougars, Budgets, Mussels, Shamrocks and everybody else," Hustlers spokesman Bob Painton said.

"We hope every team in the city will have at least one entry."

Proceeds from the event will go to help amateur sport.

Whether the Shamrocks enter depends upon how well they do in the Mann Cup series, which starts in Peterborough Monday.

"Coach Nirmal Dillon told me the Shamrocks will enter the Great Inner Tube Race if they win four games straight. They will get back Saturday, Sept. 9, one day before the race. And they will put the Mann Cup on display in our parade," Painton said.

"It would be a real thrill if they could win it four straight and be there in the parade."

The race is on rain or shine, Painton added.

"But don't worry about the weather. The sun always shines on Great Inner Tube Race day. That's why it is such a fun picnic for the spectators.

"It doesn't matter for the contestants, of course. No matter how hot it is, there's no way they're going to stay dry!"

Official entry forms should be mailed in this weekend.

'STOP SPOON-FEEDING'

Gov't Aims to Slash UIC Claims by 10%

OTTAWA (CP) — In a move "to stop spoon-feeding," Employment Minister Bud Cullen today announced proposals that would reduce the number of unemployment insurance claimants by about 10 per cent after new rules took full effect.

Cullen coupled his proposal for major cost-cutting surgery on the unemployment insurance program with announcement of plans to spend $710 million on job creation in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

The Cullen proposals would require legislation to take effect and bills probably will be introduced in the fall session of Parliament unless it is dissolved for a general election.

Hardest hit by the proposed changes to the unemployment program would be young persons, those returning to the labor force after a long absence and repeating claimants.

Cullen could not give reporters an estimate of how many persons would be affected by the tighter rules, but an official from his department later said that by 1980-81 the changes would have the effect of disqualifying about 263,000 of the approximately 2½ million benefit claims that would normally be filed.

Cullen acknowledged at a news conference that young persons in particular would be affected by the unemployment insurance changes.

"But we have to stop the spoon-feeding aspect ... to stop making it too easy for them."

Cullen said the increased job opportunities as a result of more government spending in that area "will counteract the negative impact" of unemployment insurance cuts.

The job-creation spending would create what he described as 113,000 work years of employment and involve 368,000 persons in jobs and training.

He said he could not give a detailed breakdown of what a work-year would involve in terms of numbers of jobs and the lengths of those jobs. That would depend, to some extent, on agreements with the provinces.

Cullen said the aim of tightening the unemployment insurance program, which he described as too generous, is to "increase incentives to work."

Proposed changes to the unemployment insurance program would result in savings of $580 million in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Cullen proposed increased entrance requirements for repeating claimants who have already received unemployment insurance benefits in the year before their latest claim and for new entrants to the work force.

The government also proposes to move toward "special recovery from high-income unemployment

$10M Postal Thefts Bared

MONTREAL (CP) — Police say investigations have begun in major Canadian cities to find out whether similar rings of thieves exist to one that has stolen up to $10 million in goods from the mails in Montreal during the last two years.

Two postal employees, a truck driver and a supervisor, arrested Thursday in connection with the ring were to be arraigned in sessions court today. The arrests followed an 18-month investigation and more are expected, although the size of the ring is not yet known, a police spokesman said.

A Post Office official said the two had been suspended pending the outcome of the charges.

Constable Norman Couillard, a Montreal police spokesman, said postal trucks had been robbed three or four times a month of cash, jewels, furs and expensive clothing, and estimated that each heist netted at least $200,000.

The thefts were made only from trucks containing valuable merchandise and never occurred twice in the same place.

In other cases, mailing addresses were changed and stolen goods loaded on particular trucks. A driver posing in an official uniform would drive the vehicle to a designated area and unload it, returning it empty to the postal station.

"We will never be able to determine with absolute precision the exact amount the members of this ring accumulated in a little more than two years," Couillard said. "The sum of $10 million is more than reasonable in this case."

A spokesman for the post office in Vancouver said there is no indication of any organized ring operating out of either the Vancouver or Victoria offices.

He was unable to say whether either centre figures in the Montreal-based investigation.

Jaunt by Judges Raising a Storm

VANCOUVER — Teachers were flown to Vancouver from Ottawa to teach English to a group of federal judges from Quebec, according to the Vancouver Province.

A political storm is building over the judges' expenses-paid trip, but the federal justice department refuses to say why the course is being held in Vancouver, 3,152 miles (5,073 kilometres) from Quebec City.

The group includes about 25 judges and, with their wives and the teachers, the entire entourage numbers about 60 people.

There were calls Thursday for the resignation of the judges' spokesman, lawyer Roger Collette, who had told the Province that the taxpayers are paying for the 12-day course at the Bayshore Inn, but he wanted no publicity.

John Fraser, Conservative MP for Vancouver South, wants to raise the matter in the Commons. He said "Mr. Collette's position ought to be under serious consideration.

"His usefulness is extremely limited because of his remarkable attitude and his irresponsible statements."

Outraged members of the public called the Province, protesting Collette's remarks and demanding that he be fired.

A senior Ottawa civil servant said: "If Collette said those things, he's crazy."

Collette, who also is staying at the Bayshore, denied talking to the Province. He said Thursday that he has not decided yet whether to sue the Province for alleged libel.

Essentially the same comments which appeared in the Province Thursday appeared also in Thursday editions of The Sun.

Asked if he will resign, he said there is no reason why he should. But he refused to answer any further questions about the course and its cost.

The federal justice department is investigating the remarks attributed to Collette, who described himself as deputy commissioner for federal judicial affairs in Ottawa.

A senior aide to Justice Minister Otto Lang said that Collette, who organized the English course, is on contract to the judicial affairs department — but is not deputy commissioner.

The spokesman was unable to say how much the course, which ends today, will cost, but hopes to be able to find out by early next week.

He said Lang has been told about the situation.

"Mr. Lang wants to make it clear that all members of the public have a right to this information," said the aide.

Quebec Appeal Court Judge Andre Dube, one of the judges on the course, said in clear English: "It is an intensive course, and we are talking English as much as we can and are benefiting a lot. At least one-third of our cases are in English. I think the fuss is for nothing."

Judge Dube confirmed that there are about 25 judges on the course and that some of the English teachers had been flown to Vancouver from Ottawa and other parts of the country.

The judges are getting a special government rate at the hotel and, Judge Dube said, they are paying for meals out of their own pockets. He said they had flown to Vancouver on advance-purchase tickets, not first-class tickets.

Players One, PWA Zero

VERNON (CP) — A chartered Pacific Western Airlines 737 made an unscheduled flight to Kelowna from Calgary Thursday when 127 lacrosse players, officials and wives refused to get off the plane in Calgary.

The four teams, representing Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, were bound for the Canadian senior B lacrosse championship here.

The pilot and air crew expected everyone to disembark when the plane landed at Calgary but everyone stayed on board, a team official said.

Art Rattle, spokesman for the Ontario Lacrosse Association who was on the plane in Calgary, said: "We just stayed put and told them we weren't going to move. I think the air crew expected us to get off but we were told when we left Toronto that we were going to land in Kelowna."

Following a 40-minute meeting with PWA officials and a team official in Calgary, the plane refueled and took off for Kelowna landing at 4:40 a.m.

Munro Orders Talks

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Labor Minister John Munro today personally intervened in the Air Canada dispute.

He called on Air Canada president Claude Taylor and the negotiating team for the International Associations of Machinists to meet him Sunday morning at an Ottawa hotel.

The talks will last as long as there appears any possibility of reaching a settlement, a spokesman for Munro said.

Talks broke off indefinitely Thursday night between Air Canada and the union representing 7,500 locked-out ground-service workers following a clear victory within the union for supporters of a tough position and its rejection by the airline.

A brief meeting Thursday evening between the two sides ended abruptly when the airline, now in the eighth day of a shutdown, said it could not agree to demands by the International Association of Machinists that it withdraw three contentious clauses from a contract proposal.

Chief union negotiator Barry Shaw, who has faced several challenges from inside the union, appeared crestfallen at the turn of events.

In an apparent reproach to the 13-member negotiating team, the union's national executive board voted earlier to support demands for withdrawal of the three clauses. Some of the negotiators had said they would accept a compromise.

The two sides were close to agreement on most issues but became bogged down over the three clauses, dealing with longer disciplinary suspensions, job classification of cargo handlers, and travel time by employees on union business.

"We have just been advised by the union that unless the three items are withdrawn, there is no point in carrying on with the negotiations," chief Air Canada negotiator Norm Radford told reporters as he left the meeting only 25 minutes after it began.

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — Independent MP Gilbert Rondeau, found guilty Friday on charges of arson and conspiracy, has been ordered to appear in sessions court on Sept. 11 for sentencing.

Judge Denis Bouchard agreed to let Rondeau, who represents Shefford riding and is the first sitting MP to be convicted of an indictable offence since 1947, remain free until sentencing. The delay in sentencing was granted at the request of defence lawyer Paul Lesage.

Legal Pot Possession Urged by Bar

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association on Thursday became the last major body of lawyers in North America to recommend modification of marijuana laws.

It passed a resolution recommending that the federal government decriminalize marijuana when owned or grown for personal adult use. The resolution also said that "the non-profit transfer of small amounts" between adult users should no longer be criminal.

Ted Seifred of Vancouver, who proposed the measure, said that last year 2,240 individuals went to jail for simple possession of marijuana and there were 37,862 convictions altogether — mostly for simple possession.

He said the American Bar Association favors decriminalization and the Canadian Medical Association in 1969 had said marijuana laws did more harm to users than marijuana itself.

"The only organization of doctors and lawyers in North America that has not come out for decriminalization is the Canadian Bar Association," Seifred said.

The resolution prompted some protest.

Bill Thompson of Peterborough, Ont., said the meeting will go down in history as the one that said "yes to pot, no to the Queen."

Bill Brown of St. John's Nfld., challenged Seifred's contention that medical criticisms of marijuana have mainly turned out to be myths.

"There must be some bad effects," said Brown, an older delegate. "Why were those 37,000 prosecuted? Are all the judges and prosecutors in this country crazy?"

His intervention was met with laughter from an audience mainly comprised of young lawyers.

"It isn't fitting for the Canadian Bar Association to encourage the use of marijuana," Brown said, adding that the only user he had ever known had stolen a car.

But Morris Manning of Toronto said that as a controlled substance under the Food and Drug Act, marijuana would still be subject to control.

'McGeer Has No Right To Judge'

Education Minister Pat McGeer has no right to judge teachers found guilty of marijuana offences but discharged by the courts, B.C. Teachers Federation president Pat Brady said today.

Court discharges should be upheld by school boards and the ministry, Brady said in an interview.

Brady, who said the BCTF does not condone the use of drugs, said McGeer's decision to revoke the licences of teachers found guilty in the future of marijuana offences puts them in "double jeopardy."

He also criticized McGeer's decision to review the granting of teaching certificates and to ask the person seeking a certificate whether he uses drugs.

"We see this as an invasion of privacy and a violation of the individual's civil liberties," he said.

Brady said teachers should only lose their jobs over drug charges if the courts convict and sentence them.

McGeer said Thursday he was disappointed with a decision by the Coquitlam school board to reinstate auto mechanics teacher Dennis Hilton, 29, after he was found guilty but granted a conditional discharge on a charge of possession of marijuana.

He said pot-smoking teachers will be removed from the school system because educators have an obligation to maintain high moral standards.

Coquitlam school board chairman Eunice Parker said she finds McGeer's criticism incredible. School boards have no alternative under the Public Schools Act but to reinstate a teacher who is found guilty of a marijuana offence but receives a conditional or absolute discharge, she said.

Smedley accused McGeer of using school trustees as a "scapegoat" at a politically opportune time when school boards are under fire for high budgets.

Pollution Meeting Polluted

TORONTO (CP) — About 100 persons at a conference on air pollution were forced to leave Environment Canada's research centre Thursday when a container of toxic gas spilled.

Scientists and government officials were attending the NATO-sponsored conference when a 700-cubic-inch container of nitrous oxide, known as laughing gas, was accidentally knocked over in a research laboratory.

One technician was taken to hospital with burns to his hands.

Firemen evacuated the building and drew the gas outside with exhaust fans. The building was reopened after about one hour.

BAWLF
. . .never saw letter

Criticism Blather - Bawlf

A charge that he put development considerations before his own wildlife branch in the recent decision to log a wilderness area in southeastern B.C. is "just a bunch of blather," Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said today.

The Sierra Club of B.C. claimed Thursday a mining company's letters thanking Bawlf and Forests Minister Tom Waterland for the "favorable decision" prove Bawlf represented the interests of the economic development ministry when the cabinet decided to allow selective logging in the Akamina-Kishenina area.

Bawlf said the letter from Crow's Nest Industries exists, but he has never seen it. The letter could be in the back mail or buried somewhere in his ministry but "I have no knowledge of such a letter.

"I've never met, talked to, heard of or from Crow's Nest before, during or after Akamina-Kishenina."

Bawlf said he presented a number of options on the preservation of the wilderness area to the Environment and Land-Use Committee — a committee comprising 10 cabinet ministers — and "we chose the one we thought best."

Logging of 1,900 acres of diseased trees to allow for new healthy growth will have little impact on the wilderness area which covers many thousands of acres, Bawlf said.

He pointed out that the local East Kootenay Fish and Game Association endorsed the proposal.

And although the Sierra Club still opposes any logging in the area, Bawlf said he is always interested in the club's positions and is willing to listen to them.

The Sierra Club is worried that recreational vehicles will use the logging roads and disturb the natural habitat of the wildlife.

Prized Temple Being Rebuilt

JAKARTA (AP) — Restoration of the north side of the eighth-century Borobudur temple in central Java, Indonesia's most prized national monument, has been completed, and work will start on the east side next month, the consultative committee announced.

Centuries of rain have undermined the foundations of the vast temple, bulging the lower walls outward, and algae and lichen have defaced the carved stones. The structure is being dismantled, stone by stone, and rebuilt.

$1M Can't Buy Everything

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Sodtka of Lowbanks, Ont., picked up the $1 million he won in a lottery and then learned Thursday that money does not buy everything—he was barred from a restaurant at a downtown hotel because he was not wearing a tie.

"It's the first time I've been turned down when I wanted something to eat," he said.

Sodtka, 37, a maintenance worker at a cotton mill in Welland, Ont., was in Toronto to pick up the $1-million cheque he won in the Provincial lottery draw Sunday.

Instead of eating lunch in the hotel's main dining room, he was directed to a more casual restaurant in the hotel where no tie was required.

When the Westbury Hotel manager later heard of the incident, he said:

"Oh, my gosh. It had to happen to us."

Sodtka's bank was not slow in responding to his good fortune.

Sodtka said he realized Wednesday evening that he won $1 million and his bank manager opened the bank before regular hours Thursday to allow Sodtka to arrange for investment.

Sodtka said he got the winning ticket as a birthday present July 11 from his sister Charlene.

He said he was not sure whether he would quit his job. "But the money isn't going to change me."

Sryrians, Palestinians Braced for Israeli Raid

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Syrian and Palestinian forces have been placed on full alert in expectation of a joint attack in Lebanon by Israel and right-wing Christian militias, a senior Palestinian source said today.

The source confirmed a report in the pro-Syrian leftist daily As Safir that Syrian and Palestinian forces in Lebanon had been put on alert.

The source said that rightist leader Camille Chamoun recently visited Israel secretly to coordinate the plan for a joint Israeli-Christian action.

"This is not an extraordinary move, in the current cirmcumstances," the source said. "We have information from foreign sources and high-ranking Arab diplomatic sources that Israel will try, in coordination with the Phalangists and Chamounists (right-wing Christian groups), to launch a big attack against Syrian and Palestinian forces.

"Therefore, our military people are at the ready, day or night."

In northern Lebanon, peacekeeping forces broke a two-day lull in fighting Thursday by attacking two villages in a search for Christian militiamen, reports from the region say.

The reports from the area 80 kilometres northeast of Beirut said three Christian militiamen were killed.

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told his senior staff Thursday that "creeping occupation" by the Syrian army in Lebanon could lead to the placement of Syrian missiles and Soviet advisers along Israel's border.

Dayan said the urgency of the situation in Lebanon, where Israeli-supported Christian militias have been under attack by the Syrians, will be conveyed to the "highest levels" of the U.S. government when the Israeli delegation to the Camp David summit arrives in the United States on Sunday.

In Cairo, the semi-official newspaper al-Ahram reported today Egypt will present a detailed peace plan for a comprehensive Middle East settlement at next week's summit meeting at Camp David.

The plan will be based on a six-point plan submitted at the July conference in Leeds, England, of the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers as well as U.S. state secretary, the newspaper said.

Sadat has asked his foreign ministry to make more studies to map out a detailed proposal, it said.

The six-point plan — rejected by Israel in England — proposed the return of the West Bank to Jordan and Gaza strip to Egyptian administration for a transitional period not to exceed five years. After that, Palestinians would be given the right to determine their own future.

In its editorial today, al-Ahram said the summit meeting at the U.S. presidential retreat would determine the fate of peace in the Middle East.

Meanwhile, Sadat today appeared to have won approval from one of Egypt's most powerful political figures for a new political party the president has chosen to lead.

Informed sources said Prime Minister Mamdouh Salem, 60, who has resigned from the leadership of the present ruling Arab Socialist party, said at a party meeting Sadat's new National Democratic party is "the ideal party for the country," the sources added.

$77,572 For Pool

The provincial government confirmed today it will contribute $77,572 towards renovation costs for the Crystal Pool.

The figure amounts to about one third of the total amount ($237,000) being spent by the city of Victoria and the province to refurbish the pool. A new swirl pool, weight room and two saunas have been added.

The revamped pool opened this afternoon after a four-month closure.

B.C. Fed Boss Raps Jobs Program Failure

Both the provincial and federal governments have deliberately avoided their responsibility to enact serious programs to put Canada and B.C. back to work, the president of the B.C. Federation of Labor charges.

In a prepared Labor Day message, George Johnston castigated the provincial and federal governments for their failure to initiate employment programs.

"This failure to act on unemployment isn't accidental," he said. "Both (Prime Minister) Trudeau and (Premier) Bennett know that to create new jobs for Canadians will require a substantial redirection of the economy, and that can only be accomplished through careful government planning."

But, he said, both leaders are loath to expand government intervention because it would not be in the best interests of big business.

"Our governments sit idle," Johnston said, "serving their corporate backers instead of the people who elect them."

Johnston said a major political issue the labor movement will have to tackle in the next year is to correct "the totally misleading campaign for so-called right-to-work legislation."

"Such laws don't attack unemployment at all, even though the name implies that they might guarantee workers the right to a job.

"The only purpose right-to-work laws would serve is to undermine the trade union movement and drive down wages and conditions."

RENE SIMARD, Canada's teenage singing star is back, CBC-TV's The Rene Simard Show.

KAREN KAIN, dancer with the National Ballet of Canada, headlines her own CBC-TV Superspecial in the 1978-'79 season.

DON HARRON, the multi-talented radio/stage performer is the subject of a side-splitting "roast" on CBC-TV.

LIONA BOYD, one of Canada's top classic guitarists, headlines her own CBC-TV Superspecial "Liona".

ANNE MURRAY, Canada's top songbird, headlines her own CBC-TV Superspecial "Anne Murray in Jamaica".

CHRISTOPHER WARD, Canadian pop singer-songwriter, is host of CBC-TV's new after-school variety series, Catch Up!

Top Shows Blend in CBC Schedule

Each September marks a new beginning for television networks. This fall, many favorites will return to CBC with new episodes, while several shows make their debuts. Blending top Canadian and American programming, the 1978-79 schedule has something for everyone.

The coming season's "Superspecials" will present such headliners as Karen Kain, Toller Cranston, Andre Gagnon, Anne Murray, Wayne and Shuster, the Irish Rovers and Don Harron.

Successful Show

Rene Simard guides his highly successful show into a second season of music and comedy, while Mary Tyler Moore returns to weekly television in a variety revue. Other forms of song and dance will be the focus of "Musicamera," a series which will study the Toronto Symphony, Franz Schubert, the Vancouver Chamber Orchestra and the National Ballet, among others. Country star Tommy Hunter will be back, as will the charming Muppets, whose show will appear on the full CBC network for the first time.

Fourth Season

Comedy itself has the spotlight in "King of Kensington," entering its fourth season of following the times and troubles of Larry King (portrayed by Al Waxman). Since his wife Cathy has left him, Larry is now forced to deal with bachelorhood—and his ever-present mother (Helene Winston). The people who comprise a radio station are the characters of "WKRP In Cincinnati," the tale of an old-fashioned station with poor ratings and the ambitious young man hired as program director to save it.

Literally way-out humor will be provided by "Mork and Mindy," about a being from another planet (Robin Williams) who meets a lovely young Earthling (Pam Dawber). "Rhoda," "Barney Miller," "Three's Company," "M*A*S*H" and "The Wonderful World Of Disney" return, and weekly repeats of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "All In The Family" will also continue.

Dramatic programs on the CBC slate include two Canadian hits, as well as new American imports. "The Beachcombers" sail into another season of exciting adventure between opponents Nick Adonidas (Bruno Gerussi) and Relic (Robert Clothier). This season, they'll be joined by the popular Diane Stapley, playing an RCMP Constable who will provide romance for Nick. Hardhitting police sergeants Nick Raitt (Donnelly Rhodes) and Glenn Olsen (Jonathan Welsh) are back to detect and prevent crime on "Sidestreet," which will feature an episode filmed at the indoor quarter horse show Quarterama '78.

Pinsent to Star

New episodes of "A Gift To Last," starring Gordon Pinsent as the uncle of a turn-of-the-century family in rural Ontario, will share a time slot with "The Great Detective," starring Douglas Campbell as a real-life Victorian investigator. "The Canadians" dramatizes the lives of fascinating but little-known citizens of the past, and "The Albertans" is set against the backdrop of oil and cattle country.

Series Expanded

"Dallas," based upon this summer's successful mini-series, will expand the saga of the wealthy Ewing family of Texas with Larry Hagman and Barbara Bel Geddes reprising their roles. "W.E.B." centers on the television industry and a competitive young woman (Pamela Bellwood) fighting her way through the tough corporate world. The pressures, successes and failures of law students make up "The Paper Chase," with John Houseman re-creating his Academy Award-winning role as a law professor from the movie of the same name.

Information and news programs will abound, all of them returnees from past seasons. Veteran broadcaster Ian Parker becomes the third host of "The Fifth Estate," joining Adrienne Clarkson and Eric Malling for top investigative journalism. "For The Record" dramatizes the society in which we live, ranging in topic from ethnically mixed marriages and identity crises to dreams about one's future.

Marketplace

"Marketplace" hosts Joan Watson and Harry Brown continue to inform consumers how to get the most (and best) for their dollar, and "Ombudsman" Robert Cooper aids ordinary citizens in dealing with private institutions and governments. Peter Kent hosts a new season of "CBC Newsmagazine" and Patrick Watson takes "The Watson Report" behind the headlines for examination of the people who make decisions affecting all Canadians.

"Fortunes," in its second season, concerns itself with Canada's economic issues as viewed by the Agriculture and Resources Department. "Man Alive" is designed to inform and enlighten viewers about the spiritual dimension of everyday life; it opens its 12th season with Roy Bonisteel as host.

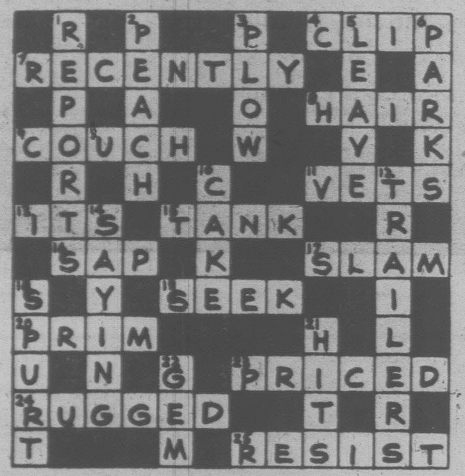
"The Nature Of Things," with host David Suzuki, will share a time slot with "Science Magazine." "Front Page Challenge" is back for an incredible 22nd season, and "This Week In Parliament" will also resume with correspondent Bill Casey.

Great Variety

The 1978-79 CBC lineup offers a great variety of programming. (Certain programs may not be telecast in some areas). Spanning the gamut from drama to comedy and music to news, the schedule offers something to please virtually everyone . . . whether your favorite happens to be Patrick Watson or The Fonz.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

4. CLIP not slip. "CLIP" links up more ideally with the clue's word "firmly." Slip easily, says, would be a more apt idea than "slip firmly."
7. RECENTLY not decently. Having been RECENTLY painted, etc., it shouldn't yet have deteriorated below the acceptable. "Decently" lacks point, since one takes it for granted that the room has been reasonably well decorated anyway.
8. HAIR not fair. A man grooms actresses or models, etc., rather than "the fair" (an unnatural expression).
9. COUCH not pouch. It is in a COUCH, more particularly, that one looks for softness as the desired quality.
11. VETS not pets. Being only human, it is inevitable that VETS (veterinarians) cannot totally satisfy absolutely everybody. It is the function of pets to be pampered, etc., rather than to be "satisfactory" in any exacting practical sense.
15. TANK not bank. The term "second best" relates ostensibly to some sort of contest, and thus implies a degree of comparability — as between a car and a military TANK. "Bank (earthwork, etc.) is less apt in this way.
16. SAP not sad. You can't call him a sap just on the basis of one stupid lapse. If the fame was important, he may indeed be sad.
17. Slam not slap. Since a slap could be playful, SLAM, in the sense of criticizing severely, is the stronger answer.
19. SEEK not seem. The indirect nature of the word seem, meaning merely to give the appearance of doing a thing, is undesirable, particularly since the clue's phrase: "you have the feeling that" is already indirect. "SEEK" is more satisfactory in the context given.
23. PRICED not prized. As suggested, it is open to people to agree or disagree with a high PRICE asked. The fact of a thing being highly prized has no particular connection with what anybody else might think.
24. RUGGED not ragged. To say that a thing "can" happen, "of course," implies improbability (as of a RUGGED defense being repeatedly pierced) rather than likelihood — as of ragged defense yielding goals.
25. RESIST not desist. One may be constrained to desist, but the clue's phrase: "one's response may well be to "suggest a reaction against the pressure.

CLUES DOWN

1. REPORTS not retorts. The phrase: "A fine command of words" relates to high competence in the use of English (in REPORTS), rather than a quick-witted facility in making clever retorts.
3. PLOW not slow. The clue suits something that may be speeded somewhat, or in which one seeks a good working speed but which remains characteristically steady-going, not "really fast." "Slow," simply the opposite of "fast," is not a good answer.
6. PARKS not Paris. The moderate phrasing of the clue ("Can be said to be .....") favors a facility — national or other PARKS — rather than a national capital (Paris). In any case, it is reasonable to relate the clue to one's own nation.
10. CAKE not cage or case. CAKE is the most natural answer since there is no particular aptness in the idea of a home-made cage or case (or cape). Also, the clue hints that this is an ordinary thing for a woman (not the average man) to make.
14. SAYING not saving. SAYING much in little time comes more easily to articulate, uninhibited types. Saving related to income, etc., not especially to the person's type.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Writer Pacifies Al

By JOHN GOUDAS and STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — "I never solve a crime," Al Freeman Jr. always used to tell the press when queried about his role of police Lt. Ed Hall on "One Life to Live."

To pacify Al, who happens to be a very good actor and a golf nut, boss Gordon Russell turned the cop into a hero in one bold stroke. Hall not only solved a murder, but made Captain to boot.

That's called keeping-the-workers-happy, one of Russell's tasks as the soap's writer-producer in New York. Out in Hollywood for a week, which meant he had to get ahead on his writing in order to leave town, Russell disclosed a searing trauma destined for the Halls this fall. A happy marriage stretches to form a triangle when wife Carla Hall is romantically overpowered by an aggressive surgeon. Carla will fall in love, and hate herself, and go through hell. After a suitable period of misery, manipulator Russell and associates have to break up the romance, of course.

The Hollywood visit may give the producer more ideas about a proposed storyline on a young country singer who comes west to seek fame and glory. Also, Russell hopes to continue with the plotting of a talk show host. After Hugh Downs popped up as a surprise guest not too long ago, overtures were made to Jack Lemmon for a visit during his Broadway run of "Tribute." So far the idea comes under the heading of wishful thinking.

A soap opera writer for more than decade, Gordon Russell has his hands full keeping track of everything since the one-hour format is here to stay. "I get to write once in a blue moon," Gordon admits. "When we went to the hour format, my job became 75 per cent administrative."

Russell spends more time with charts and logistics than he does at the typewriter. He must keep track of the comings and goings of 30 contract players.

Fans, though, like the expanded-hour form, the producer admits, and the writers and actors have adjusted to longer hours and better pay.

To keep up, Russell works a 7 a.m.-to-7 p.m. day. Gordon tapes the show in the afternoon so he can see it later, and claims he gets his best ideas for future stories by watching.

Despite his demanding schedule, Russell looks bright and bushy-tailed. What's his secret? The ponies, gang. He's a trifecta nut (that's picking them one-two-three). With two other partners, Russell claims to have hit 13 trifectas so far this season with payoffs averaging $700.

"I keep my sanity by going to the track on weekends," he said.

Spoken like a true addict!

CHANNEL CHATTER. The beautiful new girl on "Search for Tomorrow" is Megan Bagot. Megan plays Laine Adamson, the daughter of Ted Adamson in the show and this marks her very first soap role. Megan has done some stage work, but her experience has been mostly in nightclubs. She went on a world tour as part of Engelbert Humperdinck's show. Another new face on "Search" is Christopher Goutman, who is playing Marc D'Antoni, the new drama teacher at Henderson University. Chris appeared opposite Marilyn McIntyre (she's Carolyn Hanley in "Search") in the Off-Broadway production of "The Promise" . . . Crime doesn't pay — not on TV soaps. Two villains bit the dust recently on "Edge of Night":Tony Saxon (played by Louis Turenne) and Raney Cooper (played by Keil Martin) have met their demise in the soap. Warren Burton is now playing Eddie Dorrance in "All My Children," having replaced Ross Petty, who left to pursue new career goals . . . Soap fans in Sullivan, Ill., and the environs will probably want to catch the current production of "Star Spangled Girl" playing at Guy Little's Theatre. Starring in the Neil Simon comedy are Kelly Wood and Dennis Cooney (they play Mary Ellison and Jay Stallings, respectively, in "As the World Turns") plus Tony Craig (he's Draper Scott in "Edge of Night") and they have been being directed by Peter Ratray (he plays Scott Phillips in "Search for Tomorow") . . . Whenever you hear a radio announcer or an airline captain's voice on any of the soaps, you can bet that the voice probably belongs to actor Dick Terry, who also is the lead-in announcer for many soaps including "All My Children" "Search for Tomorrow," "Love of Life," and "One Life to Live."

PLOT PORTENTS. Despite rebukes from her brother Snapper, Jill has her eye on the older, widowed Stuart, Mom's friend on "The Young and the Restless." Still, Stuart seems to prefer Mom. The Leslie-Lucas marriage of convenience may have been an act of nobility by Lucas, but brother Lance and Leslie are unable to hide their wounds. Nikki continues to show self-contempt and refuses to see young Scott.

Will Julie's shop make a go of it on "Days of Our Lives?" Doug worries about the money involved and with good reason. Meanwhile, Julie keeps a jaundiced eye on Theresa whenever Doug's around. Janice's thoughts about real mothers and adoptions truly distress Maggie. With Timmy back safe and sound, David must find the right baby-sitter, and she's obviously not Grandmother Julie.

In a twist of fate, Frank's own family may turn out to be his political downfall in "Ryan's Hope." A joke which starts out innocently enough snowballs into a major problem.

John Hearn's Collectibles

My problem in preparing this column is to gauge accurately just what it is that readers would like to know. I sometimes feel that it is all too elementary, but readers letters, which continue to arrive in reassuring numbers, confirm that for every expert out there, there are a hundred others whose interest is less than avid but far more than just average. It is to these that I address myself.

For example, Marion Bunting of Cumberland, B,C, asks how she can set about collecting Goss Heraldic China — what are the possible sources of supply?

If there were any such thing as a Goss Heraldic China Supply Company I don't see that there would be any interest in collecting the stuff; there is no thrill in tracking down an item in a catalogue. The fun lies in knowing that wherever you go the object of your search may appear—church bazaars, flea markets, thrift stores, lawn sales—and, of course, antique stores everywhere.

Browsing through antique stores is a joy any time but far more so if you know what you are looking for. The dealer always hopes you will buy something but he is very well aware of the importance of browsers. On the other hand I am convinced that too many potential buyers are intimidated by dealers and reluctant to show their ignorance. They visualize horrendous conversations that go something like this.

Customer (clutching a soiled $10 bill)—I wondered if you had any Goss Heraldic Chinaware.

Dealer (interposing himself between the customer and the door)—By a happy stroke of good fortune I have recently acquired a Goss Cottage of unimpeachable authenticity—the Ledbury 'Feathers' Hotel. Extremely rare. A steal at $1,000.

Intimidating but pure fantasy. Any good dealer will treat your $10 with the respect it deserves if only because he wants you to come back again and again.

What you should never, never do is to insult the dealer. Do not tell him his price is ridiculous. Do not tell him about the truckload of Goss Cottages with which your grandmother paved the driveway. Do not sneer at his goods and offer half his asking price. If you want to dicker do so with a proper sense of delicacy. Rave about the item. Agree that it is rare and beautiful and in perfect condition and that you have just the spot for it—if only you could afford it. Agree that his price is more reasonable but your budget is stalled at a level about 10% below his minimum. Express polite regrets—then see if he lets you leave the store.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R.R. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

She and seven characters will do sketches, songs and dances. ⬌ : 15.2m.//50ft./pi.

Wide, Country-Style Bungalow

This three-bedroom, non-basement bungalow presents a low, wide, ranch-style profile and is ideally suited to the medium frontage lot. The heavy cedar shake roof, mixed horizontal and vertical siding, brick veneer and chimney, and the beamed verandah and heavily accented windows create the mood of a western ranch house of pioneer days.

The weather-recessed porch entry leads into a small foyer which opens directly left into the cozy and convivial living room, which features a raised hearth fieldstone fireplace and wide picture window.

A well-planned U-shaped kitchen separates from the dining room via snack bar counter, and from the family room via convenient pocket door. The dining room has a charming bay window alcove, encouraging a decorator's touch for the interior design of the room. The family room connects to a rear patio via sliding glass doors for easy access to outdoor dining in fair weather.

Accessible from both the family room and the rear of the garage is the laundry/utility room complex, containing the side-by-side configuration of washer and dryer. The garage access enables the establishment of a mud room facility, convenient to the home handyman.

All three bedrooms are positioned well away from the living room and the family room for freedom from disturbance, and all have good exposure for excellent natural light. The master bedroom has a three-piece ensuite with shower behind a pocket door for space-saving.

A single enclosed garage, with space for the establishment of a workbench, completes the convenience facilities of this compact but comfortable home.

Plans for design No. 76-1385 may be purchased either by the single set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100, and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD—The TV Mailbag:

Q. Whatever happened to Michael Cole of the "Mod Squad"? I haven't seen him on television for a long time. Has he quit acting?—M.M., Orwell, Ohio.

A. Michael Cole is still involved in acting but has been unsuccessful so far in obtaining a regular television series. A few seasons back, he was a regular on "Barbary Coast" but that series made it for only one season before being cancelled because of poor ratings. Cole is scheduled to appear in the television min-series "Evening in Byzantium," playing the role of Danny, a young filmmaker.

Q. There is a mototcycle commercial currently making the rounds where a guy comes up to ask a girl driving a cycle about her bike. When he gets arond to wanting to ride the motorcycle, another man rides up and tells him to get his own cycle. I swear that is Burt Reynolds. Am I right?—R.L., Washington, North Carolina.

A. That is not Burt Reynolds.

Q. I understand Michael Landon of "Little House on the Prairie," has a large family in real life. How big is his family? S.G., Castro Valley, Calif.

A. In real life, Landon has a family of seven children, ranging in age 28 to 2.

Q. Here's a trivia question that I can't find an answer to. Who was the original Old Ranger on the series, "Death Valley Days" during athe 1950s?

A. Although actor-turned-politician Ronald Reagan gained much fame as one of the Old Rangers on the series that began in 1951, the original character was played by Stanley Andrews for 12 years.

Q. How old was Morris the cat when he died and what was the cause of death? Also, who will replace him on those cat commercials?—I.R., East Brunswick, N.J.

A. Morris was 17 years of age when he died, which is pretty old for a cat. Cause of death was associated with cardiac complications related to old age. A spokesperson for Star-Kist Foods, Inc, said Morris' role would be perpetuated by a cat that has served as his understudy for some time.

Q. I was told recently by a good friend that Perry Como and Dean Martin are brothers. Can this be true?—E.J., Victoria, B.C.

A. They are not brothers.

Q. Years ago, James Garner alternated with another actor in a series called "Maverick." Wasn't this other fellow Robert Conrad of the current series "Black Sheep Squadron?"—A.O., Chapsville, Penn.

A. The role of Bart was played by actor Jack Kelly. In addition, for a few seasons Roger Moore played cousin Beau.

McCULLOUGH . . . no wonder she's laughing

Last year around this time I reviewed Australian writer Colleen McCullough's much ballyhooed opus, The Thorn Birds. Dubbed "The Australian Gone With the Wind", The Thorn Birds in its hardcover edition topped the best-seller lists for months.

This year, it's available in paperback for the first time. And it's literally everywhere. On bookshelves, retail and private; on buses, planes and trains; on hall tables, coffee tables and night tables and so on. Pondering this phenomenon, I concluded that a re-run of last year's review might be in order. Please don't ask what a review of an Australian novel is doing in a column that is supposed to be about Canadian books. There's just something about the annual summer hiatus which brings out the internationalist in me. And anyway, publishing phenomena are always interesting, wherever they occur.

If you want to know why a 700-page chronicle of a family's history is such a resounding success, the answer in a nutshell is that it contains a heroine who is free to be as attractive and flirtatious as she chooses with little or no sexual consequences. Wittingly or otherwise, Colleen McCullough has expoited what is obviously a popular female fantasy. Literature, it ain't, but Miss McCullough is no doubt shrugging her shoulders all the way to the bank.

(Before The Thorn Birds, McCullough described herself as "an old maid making $8,000 a year who pictured the future at age 70 in a cold water flat somewhere" and decided to do something about it. With Avon Books picking up the paperback rights to her novel for a cool $1.9 million, a lifetime supply of hot water should now be guaranteed.)

The Thorn Birds is no Gone With the Wind, but it's probably worth the trouble if you're wondering what to do with a rainy weekend. I found her characters unconvincing and her story far-fetched, but I wasn't bored.

The Thorn Birds makes a stab or two at passing history; there's a call to arms by Australian Prime Minister Robert Menzies and a scene at Tobruk, for example, as well as reference to the Greek revolution in 1965. There's also a disastrous bush fire in which Paddy, the patriarch of the Cleary family, is roasted alive, and a heroine with the face of an angel and a will like a seven-foot crowbar. But any resemb'ence to Margaret Mitchell's famous epic ends there. As a novelist, McCullough has more in common with those pseudononymous Harlequin ladies and Ethel M. Dell.

The Cleary story begins in 1915 when Meggie, McCullough's heroine, is four. Their poverty-stricken New Zealand existence is interrupted for good when Paddy's wealthy sister invites them to make the move to her Australian ranch, which they will work for her and later inherit.

There they meet Father Ralph de Bricassart, a superlatively "beautiful" priest who takes a shine to Meggie and gets in the way of the inheritance to boot. The rest of the tale describes what happens when Meggie grows up (as if all you Harlequin fans out there haven't already guessed) and what becomes of her children. (She has two of them, not without difficulty.)

What makes all this nonsense readable is McCullough's genuine talent for description. "Three spare axes were lying nearby," she will write, "for eucalyptus wood blunted the sharpest axe in no time at all." Or, "The foliage grew so close to the ground that sheep could reach it easily, the result being that every wilga bottom was mown as straight as a topiary hedge." Even the most preposterous of characters comes alive when set against a background as vivid as this.

But the most interesting aspect of The Thorn Birds is its theme of sexual denial. Everybody practises it, except the Cleary parents, who could hardly have been expected to as it was their job to produce most of the other characters. Father Ralph succumbs to Meggie about once every 25 years; her seven brothers are celibates; her husband is a latent homosexual, and her children have Other Things on their mind.

Why, one wonders. Is McCullough getting even with men? Are Australian droughts really that bad? Whatever the explanation, The Thorn Birds can best be categorized as a story about a time and place where men are men and women are women and never the twain shall meet. Well, hardly ever.

The Corvid World

By HAROLD HOSFORD

It may not be written, but I think it is understood, that a book reviewer should be objective. If this be so, then I had better apologize now; I can no more be objective about Tony Angell's Ravens, Crows, Magpies and Jays than I can about the memories it evokes. There are few pages in this remarkable book when, through Angell's accounts of his experiences with the birds that are his subject, I was not taken back to those golden days of youth, those great days of discovery, when the cares of life were far away — and on other shoulders. Let one passage illustrate:

"Before the coastal mountains around Los Angeles were flattened for homes and punctured for roadways, there were still places that youngsters could hike to and wrap up in the solitude and adventure there. Pairs of scrub jays came to scold us as we set up our camps. I remember awakening those mornings to the faint feeling of being watched and, upon looking up, I usually found a jay, head cocked over, staring me full in the face. I came home with such memories along with the usual good dose of poison oak."

Angell's hills of Los Angeles are my oak woods of Manitoba; his scrub jays, my blue jays; and his poison oak my poison ivy — otherwise our memories are the same.

But Ravens, Crows, Magpies and Jays is more than a book of memories; it is an account — a very personal account, to be sure — of a remarkable group of birds. More than that, it is an artist's account, for Tony Angell is first an artist — as an earlier book, Owls, revealed — and Ravens, Crows, Magpies and Jays is the vehicle for his artistic efforts.

Choosing to work only in black and white (Owls was in full color) Angell, with an artist's eye for posture and expression, has brought personality and vigor to his subjects. On page after page his birds explode into life. They are never static, as ravens, crows, magpies, and jays are never static. They are always impish, mischievous, contriving — as ravens, crows, magpies and jays are always impish, mischievous, and contriving. And they reveal the family for what it is, a group of beautiful and remarkably intelligent birds.

The corvids, to Anglicize "Corvidae" — the Latin name for the family of ravens, crows, magpies and jays — are known throughout the world. The raven, which epitomizes the corvids, may be the most cosmopolitan of all birds. There are more than a hundred species known. Angell deals with the 18 "that occur within the United States," which, since Hawaii is now one of these, includes the Alala or Hawaiian Crow. Unfortunately, to birdwatchers of the northwest coast — and to bird listers throughout the country — Angell has chosen to lump our beloved little Northwestern Crow with the Common Crow of the interior. It is a decision that he will be brought to account for, I am sure.

In addition to an essay on each species, Angell also explores the peculiar adaptations — both social and physical — that have made the corvids so successful in their exploitation of often hostile environments and the changing attitudes of man.

Angell describes how, first held in respect and awe by primitive man as manifestations of the mystical forces that shaped his life, members of the corvids later survived the unrelenting onslaught of another kind of man who saw in their hated black forms a threat to his existence, to now embark on a new phase of their relations with humans, a phase in which they are recognized for what they are, interesting and exciting experiments in evolution.

Tracking Down The Busy Vet In His Surgery

By E. UHR

YORKSHIRE—"All right then, meet me Wednesday, no it had better be Tuesday, in the bar of the Five Casks Hotel. The big one on the corner of the marketplace; not the little one by the river. At 12:30. Goodbye?"

"Wait. Don't hang up. What town?"

"Oh yes. The town of —."

It was a furtive business and getting more furtive by the minute, this meeting with a man whose name and whereabouts are a carefully guarded secret. It was not a ransom dropoff. Nor was it a contact between secret agents. It wasn't even a news leak. It was an appointment with the world's most popular veterinarian, James Herriot.

Herriot is the pseudonym of the author whose bestselling books, All Things Wise and Wonderful — 27 out of the last 29 weeks on the bestseller list, eight of them in first place — make the hard work, long hours and frustrations of a rural veterinarian sound like a continous idyll. Herriot's compassion for his animal patients, whom he treats not as so much livestock but as individuals with distinct personalities, is exceeded only by his compassion for his own species and delight in its vagaries.

His Yorkshire is peopled with a Dickensian collection of characters. There are his partner, the competent, highminded, and quixotic Siegfried, and his playboy brother, Tristan. There are the overpowering Miss Harbottle, the sadistic and lecherous Angus Grier, Mrs. Pumphrey, who carries anthropomorphism to the extreme of sending sherry and brandy to her convalescing pekingese, a caprice with obvious benefits for the veterinarian. There is Mallock, the local "knacker," whose business it is to dispose of unmarketable carcasses, and whose own children play in carrion as contendedly as other people's children build sandcastles. There are the farmers: always an eccentric, hardworking breed, some tightfisted and unscrupulous, others generous when they barely have enough for themselves, often courageous, occasionally vicious, usually critical, imbued with folk wisdom and absurd superstition.

And there is Herriot himself, wresting amusement from his own mistakes and misdiagnoses: his bungled courtship; the cow that he was certain had a broken pelvis and would never get up again, who proceeded to prove him wrong and haunt him for years, demonstrating that whereas doctors bury their mistakes, veterinarians are dogged — if not cowed — by theirs; and the pet parakeet that died of fright in his hand (and for whom he quickly and quietly substituted another). He describes his triumphs too: the births, the cures, the inexplicable miracles.

It hadn't been easy to get his phone number, and it wasn't easy to get to him. In fact when I finally stepped off the train, I was pretty sure I was in the wrong place. The platform was in the middle of nowhere; there was no town anywhere around. I thought of loitering around a phone, waiting for it to ring and a muffled voice to direct me elsewhere, but I couldn't find a phone. There was a ladies' room, but its interior at first only increased my apprehension. It couldn't be real; it had to be part of a Victorian ghost town. It was a huge room with a cold marble-fronted fireplace, straight chairs and a dining table covered by a purple plush cloth — all wrapped in layers of dust. And no plumbing. Then, behind a door, I found two sure signs of the 20th century: a long and explicit WARNING about the dangers of venereal disease — and a pay toilet.

Herriot and friends in rare moment of repose

With renewed hope I banged at the TICKETS AND INFORMATION window, and eventually a face became vaguely visible on the other side of the grimy glass. "Is there a town anywhere around here?"

"That way," he pointed. Exactly as Herriot had described it: the austere brick buildings, snowdrops blooming everywhere, the wide cobblestone marketplace. There were even two hotels called "The Five Casks." (That in a tiny community with scarcely two hotels both should have the same name didn't surprise me in the least. I had been in this country long enough to learn that when the English find a name they like, they stick with it. I had already spent a day in Hampstead hunting for a Frognal address on Frognal Close, Frognal Way, Frognal Court, Frognal Gardens, Frognal Lane, and Frognal Rise.) So I went into the bar of the Five Casks Hotel at the corner of the marketplace and waited. And he appeared.

There I was, face to face with the elusive James Herriot. What a triumph! Well, not quite. Tourists pour in torrents through his "surgery" (clinic). In fact I appear to be the only person who's ever had trouble finding him. He's become one of the stops on the Grand Tour now, along with the Tower of London and Winchester Cathedral. No doubt he'll be listed in the next edition of the Blue Guide. ". . . An alternative route from London to Edinburgh passes through the 18th-century market town of —. Well worth the visit to see the surgery of James Herriot. No admission fee. Closed Sundays . . ."

He said with a wan smile, "My cover's been blown."

To use the other side of the hunting metaphor, he's a sitting duck. Most celebrities can escape a too-clamorous public by taking a villa on the Riviera or moving to a country estate surrounded by an electrified fence. But Herriot's life's work is caring for the animals in and around the town where he lives. He has office hours twice a day. "They come in hundreds to the surgery, snapping their pictures. But it's not a show, not an exhibition. It's a room full of sick animals and their worried owners. Naturally, some people get annoyed. And it's exhausting having the flashbulbs flashing. And embarrassing. And they don't just take pictures; they want to visit, to spend the day with me.

"They are paying me a great compliment, I quite realize that. At the same time it is putting a tremendous strain on me. I'm very busy. I used to work seven days a week. For the past year I've only worked six, but of course I work at night too. Sometimes all night."

"The writing has dwindled away. I'm bombarded with thousands of letters and books. I don't have time to read the books. To some people I send form replies. But others must be answered personally, so when I get a few minutes to spare I write letters."

He was sandwiching in this interview during his lunch hour. We had moved to the hotel restaurant — quieter than the bar — and he chatted with the overworked waitress about how it felt to be rushed, drank a pint of bitter, and put away a cheese omelet and "a bit of turnip." He was dressed in his "working clothes": a beige cardigan sweater with sagging pockets, brown baggy pants, and a nondescript shirt and tie. His gray and white hair straggled down his neck and under his collar. He obviously didn't take time for haircuts. He had a kindly roundish face with gentle features and the ruddy, silk complexion that people on this island get when they spend time outdoors — skin without blemishes, seemingly without pores. It was uncanny the way he looked, acted, was the character of his books. Only the name had been changed. He said: "I used my life as a framework for telling stories."

He came to writing relatively late, and for the simple reason that he had a lot of good stories to tell. "Amusing things happen with animals. I talked about writing a book for years and years. Then one day my wife said, 'You'll never write a book.' I said, 'What do you mean?' She said, 'We've been married for 25 years. You're 50 years old. People don't suddenly start to write a book at the age of 50.' That rather settled it. I got down to it. I wrote while watching television at night. If I'd gone off in a room alone to write, I should never have seen my family. I wrote in among them for 15 minutes or a half hour at a time. I've never written more than an hour at a time in my life. The sweat is getting it down in the first place. Working over it is the part I like."

Before he became a writer, he was a reader. "I'm a great reader. I read everything. Especially Americans. Hemingway, Fitzgerald, Salinger, Budd Schulberg. I like Huxley, Conan Doyle. I read historical biographies, Richard Aldington, and histories. Nothing is better than a well-written history. But now I don't have time. I can only read in bed."

He has no shortage of things to say: "So far I've only written about the old black-magic days; when I first qualified. All the funny old cures. After the war everything changed, with the new drugs — antibiotics, steroids — and the new treatments and operations. Quite a fascinating change in vet practices. The cesareans. Doctors bring their patients to the hospital for complicated surgery, but the vet has to do it in the barn or in the fields. And I have some funny tales about artificial insemination. That's relatively new. It used to be that any old bull would do, to keep the cows producing milk. Nobody thought about increasing the quality of the livestock. You know artificial insemination here is handled by a government agency — the Milk Marketing Board. That's why the farmers call the man who comes around 'The Bull in the Bowler.'

"My books have information in them. People can enjoy them and learn a bit, too, about animals."

No one would dispute that he knows his subject inside and out. In fact many of his most graphic descriptions are of insides coming out: billowing and seeping and exploding from a variety of natural and surgical orifices. He doesn't shy away from accurate names and clinical details. Toxemia, dysentery, milk fever, eversion of the uterus, prolapsed uterus, distemper, hematomas, papillomas, lipomas, lymphosarcomas, carcinomas, epilepsy, pyloric stenosis, pyrometritis, urticaria are practically household words when he's finished with them. With a proper index his book could serve as a "Dr. Spock" for animal owners, alerting them to symptoms that can be treated casually and symptoms that require immediate attention. This approach enables Herriot to avoid the bete noire of animal-story writers: sentimentality. "I treat them from a vet's viewpoint, with a desire to help the animal, to cure it, not to look on it with a sentimental eye."

One man's solution
To the library problem

So many people have asked me what I think about the current fuss concerning the Greater Victoria Public Library that I feel justified in devoting a column to it. I'd best start with a disclaimer. Although I am a member of the Library Board, my views are my own. The chairman is the board's official spokesman and his public statements represent majority opinions of the board. Thus, what I have to say should be read as the opinion of one concerned, knowledgeable, private individual.

The current hullabaloo stems from the urgent need of the central library to move from its hopelessly inadequate premises at Yates and Blanshard to somewhere more commodious. The original 1904 Carnegie Gothic structure was designed to house a small collection to serve a small population, and the ill-designed 1951 extension showed a deplorable lack of imagination and a total disregard of functional and future needs.

A few statistics tell the story. Since 1951 the population of Greater Victoria has increased by 65 per cent, book usage by 326 per cent, number of volumes catalogued by 465 per cent, and questions to the reference department by a whopping 1,628 per cent. So cramped is the place that only 56 per cent of total space is available to the public and seating space is a mere one-third of requirements.

No one is baying for the moon, but surely the capital city of British Columbia ought at least to match the public library facilities available in other western Canadian cities. As things stand we are way behind. Six western Canadian cities boast libraries with space of an average .45 square feet per capita. We have less than half, a miserable .21 square feet per capita.

But the most telling statistics are these: Use of the Greater Victoria Public Library system is the highest in Canada for cities with more than 100,000 population. And for cities within the population range of 125,000 to 350,000 our per capita costs are lower than anywhere except the city of York, which has the lowest usage rate of all.

Statistics, however impressive and compelling, tell only part of the story. One has to spend some time behind the scenes to grasp the full horror of the situation. Clerks are forced to work at small desks in ill-lit passages behind book stacks. Highly skilled librarians lack quiet places to concentrate and are further frustrated by seeing their ideas for displays, activities, and greater efficiency still-born though lack of space. Toilet facilities are an absolute disgrace. Space for serious research is non-existent. One could go on and on.

The Library Board (which, incidentally, through lack of space has to hold meetings in the Capital Regional District offices on Yates), is an advisory body; all major decisions concerning the library are made, quite rightly, by the mayors and aldermen of the four core municipalities, who hold the purse-strings. They are all aware of the situation and are fully agreed that something must be done. The trouble is they cannot agree what that 'something' should be.

The proposal recently placed before the councils by the Library Board is that the central library be moved to rented space in the new provincial government building on Broughton Street. Thanks to special financial arrangements the rent is reasonable and there is a ten-year lease with renewal options. With ample library and parking space available, the proposition is, on the face of it, an attractive one.

As you know, the proposal was presented to each council in turn. The four mayors supported it wholeheartedly, but it met strong aldermanic opposition in Oak Bay, Victoria and, to a lesser extent, Saanich. Esquimalt council, however, turned down the proposition, despite a well reasoned appeal by Mayor Art Young. The decision has to be unanimous, so for the moment the matter rests there and unless at least one Esquimalt alderman reverses his decision at a subsequent meeting we have a stalemate.

The meetings, all of which I attended, were not distinguished by scintillating debate, and it seemed to me that some of the dissenting aldermen had made up their minds in advance and had no wish to be confused by facts, even elementary facts known to most of the 55,000 or so people who use the central library every month.

This strengthened rumors that some aldermen voted in conformity with a political party line, and if this is so one can only deplore the fact that the library has become a political football.

Meanwhile, what can be done? There are logical reasons why simplistic solutions are unfeasible. Expansion on the present site is impossible; the creation of more branch libraries would place an added burden on the central library, which services them. And so on. However, there is a solution — a two-phase solution — and this we should adopt.

Personally (and I again stress that I am speaking only for myself), I feel we must move the central library to Broughton Street immediately, but that location should be regarded as temporary lodging for only ten years — ample time for a brand new centrally-located library building to be constructed.

A new building should have been constructed years ago, but it wasn't, so we must now pay for our folly by spending money on rent, which is money down the drain. The thing is, we must make the decision to build now; further procrastination will merely prolong the agony and permit some politicians to turn sore-pressed taxpayers against an innocent victim: the library. This must not be allowed to happen.

I have it on the best possible authority that an ideal site, owned by the City of Victoria, is available, and there is no reason why planning should not commence without further delay. But, I assure you, it will not unless library-users, the great silent majority, make their wishes known, for politicians rarely initiate; they respond to public clamor.

We have recreation centres, with and without ice; we have theatres and golf links and a municipally-owned covered tennis complex and soon will have a giant bird-cage in the form of a renovated Crystal Gardens. Fine. But life should not consist wholly of froth and bubble; there must also be something for the mind, and what better than a fine public library which, never let it be forgotten, is an extension of the educational system.

Schools, which cost us so much, should teach the young how to learn; public libraries serve as treasure-houses of knowledge for those unable to proceed to university but never cease to want intellectual stimulation, whether for practical purposes or for the sheer joy of learning. I am thinking chiefly of books, but audio-visual departments also play a vital role.

Greater Victoria is one of the most literate regions in the country. Unfortunately, bookish people are less vociferous than the athletic crowd and politicians respond to noise and are apt to misinterpret silence as assent. So, make a noise. Write letters to editors. Pester politicians. And continue to make a noise until action is taken.

You may be told, as I have been told, that we cannot afford to build a new public library, and figures will be produced to prove this. Rubbish. We cannot afford not to build. Delay has already increased costs and further delay of the inevitable will merely add to the burden. It is simply a question of revising priorities and it is up to us library-using taxpayers to see to it that a new library building takes precedence over everything else. Go to it! Get involved!

A Journey into Realm of Abiding Mystery

By JULIAN REID

He was, in his own words, "a bone-seeking man" — an anthropologically-oriented palaentologist by profession, by temperament an eternally curious delver into the dark abysses of history and prehistory. But he was more than merely that. He was above all else from birth a visionary: one of that rare gifted breed whose eyes can somehow penetrate beyond the prosaically shabby facade of the mundane world, through to the archetypal Powers that pulse behind it. And he was in addition a writer: a word-wielder extraordinary, graced with that precious capacity to share his most private visions with a whole waiting world of his fellow mortals.

When Loren Eiseley died in July of 1977, among the fragments of himself that he left behind was a retrospective selection of his own favorites among his writings, chosen and arranged according to his own plan. And now, slightly amplified by the addition of a few posthumous pieces, this self-structured literary memorial has been published under the title The Star Thrower— a substantial volume containing no fewer than 21 essays (12 of them hitherto uncollected), along with two never-before-published short stories, a flimsy sheaf of youthful poems, and by way of introduction to the whole assemblage a characteristically elegant and incisive tribute by the late W. H. Auden, reprinted from a 1970 issue of The New Yorker.

The result, for anyone not previously acquainted with Eiseley's writings, should prove richly rewarding — an exhilarating initiation into the world of one of the most eloquently evocative nature-essayists of our time. The confirmed Eiseley enthusiast, however, may find it a trifle disappointing — for the simple reason that almost all of the finest entries here are already familiar to him from earlier collections, five of them being reprinted from The Unexpected Universe, three from The Immense Journey, and one from The Firmament of Time. As for the hitherto-uncollected pieces, they are mostly relatively minor Eiseley. Which is to say that by ordinary standards they are very fine indeed, but fall just a hair's-breadth short of being supernally so.

For one thing, Eiseley the poet is done small justice here, since the 10 early pieces included (dating from 1930 through 1943) are all in a very minor key, pleasant but somewhat watery, like rain-pool reflections of the lyrics of Robert Frost. But more significant, I think, is a certain (perhaps forgiveable) bias in the selection of essays that Eiseley the prose-poet has chosen to include.

It is perfectly understandable that the author, as a much-honored educator and academic administrator, should consecrete a good half of his text to discussions of the pressing issues he groups together under the omnibus head "Science and Humanism" — and there can be no question that his observations on these matters are at once eloquent and timely.

But nevertheless, the fact remains that, apart from the three superb pieces that open and conclude the section, the contributions here are measured, scholarly, and relatively impersonal. They might just as well be the work of some other inspired but relatively orthodox humanist — a Lewis Mumford, say, or a Herbert J. Muller. And while this is high praise in its way, one finds oneself yearning for the unique Eiseley touch.

From that, one must turn instead to the section headed "Nature and Autobiography" — two topics which, for Eiseley, are interfused and to all intents and purposes synonymous. After all, as he himself observed in a characteristically electrifying phrase, "One does not meet oneself until one catches the reflection from an eye other than human."

As he undergoes his world-shaking encounters with such "hidden teachers" of the universal wisdom as spiders, squirrels, and the fossilized skulls of our half-human forefathers, Eiseley is time and again seized by that "hair raising chill" which he aptly compares to the trembling that seized Job when a vast anonymous Voice boomed forth from the Whirlwind. He finds himself all of a sudden plunged headlong into a world of archetypal numinosity and dream-like intensities, a realm that is positively fraught with the immanent presence of the Miraculous. And all this even though, as a trained scientist, he is certainly no stranger to what he at one point characterizes as "the despair once alluded to as the utterly hopeless fear confined to moderns — that no miracles can ever happen."

In Loren Eiseley's world, however, they not only can happen but continually do — largely because Eiseley, unlike most of us, has conscientiously re-trained himself in that once-universal faculty that is still the prerogative of children everywhere, the gift of seeing things "from an inverted angle," as he puts it, and thereby catching the occasional oblique glimpse into the vast, pulsing heart of that transcendental Beyond "out of which all miracles emerge, and which, once defined, ceases to satisfy the human need for symbols."

This is a realm of abiding mystery into which today all too few scientists (and all too few self-professed artists, for that matter) are brave enough to venture. But it is Loren Eiseley's spirtual homeland — that shadowy Night Country of myth and marvel with whose reverberating distance he seems primordially at one.

THE STAR THROWER, by Loren Eiseley. Fitzhenry and Whiteside. $16.00.

FROM MAJOR League Baseball to CFL . . . and Hockey Night in Canada to Curling's four major bonspiels . . . there's top sports entertainment for Canadian television viewers throughout the 1978-79 season on CBC television. (For story and pictures on CBC's new fall schedule see Page 1)

Looking at Stars

Does art follow life? Does life follow art? Maybe it's either . . . or neither. Anyhow, the television script writers were "acting affirmatively" and consistently coming up with prestigious careers for female characters. A series proposed for the future would cast Brenda Vaccaro as a brain surgeon. Women lawyers will be an abundant breed with Barbara Parkins leading the list as a specialist in malpractice cases in the mini-series, "The Critical List." It's due on NBC in the fall.

Perpetually bloodthirsty Dracula is proving half a dozen times over this year that a scary legend is hard to kill off. The Bela Lugosi movie re-runs from the 1930s have long elicited guffaws from loyal cults. But it was Frank Langella's Broadway performance in "Dracula," that transformed everybody's favorite vampire from a heavy into a misunderstood romantic. The word is that Langella will star in a movie adaptation of the play. Meanwhile, George Hamilton is stopping traffic in New York filming an even farther-out Dracula spoof called "Love at First Bite." An off-Broadway production, "The Passion of Dracula," has been doing swell, Louis Jordan did a version on PBS-TV and "Count Dracula," keeps popping up on the straw hat circuit.

Harold Robbins, author of that endless stream of best-selling novels, said recently that his wife Grace doesn't mind when he travels around solo because her philanthropies keep her on the move also. And do they ever. Last month she staged a gala in Cannes, France, to benefit the 150 orphans whose housing — and lives — she has improved. Now she's off to California to do good work there raising scholarship funds for U.S. kids who need special help. That takes the form of a benefit performance (again, natch, gala) at the L.A. premier of "Annie." Cyd Charisse and Tony Martin are co-chairing this one. Incidently, they flew over to Cannes to guest at Grace's July bash. Nice to have chums who are talented and famous . . . as well as good-hearted.

Was it common sense that told Virginia Graham that she would land back on TV with two shows? No. The way we hear it, it was her astrologer.

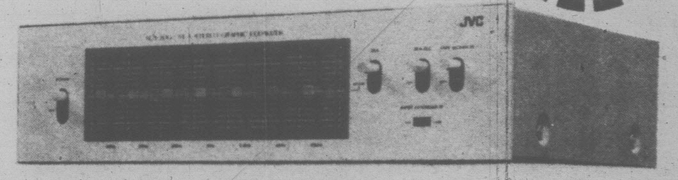
JVC

Fifty years of technical innovation has put JVC in the forefront of modern audio electronics manufacture.



SEA-20G GRAPHIC EQUALIZER

The SEA-20G has seven frequency "tone-zone" controls, one per one and a half octave. Each control, in turn, covers the 60, 150, 400, 1k, 2.4k, 6k or 15kHz tone zone. Tonal combinations are as many as 62, 748, 517! An S.E.A. defeat, S.E.A. Record, Tape Monitor, and Input Attentuator (OdB) are also provided.

$$199^{95}$

The KD-15 Stereo Cassette Deck

The KD-15 is priced even lower than other JVC decks, but it includes the following features: Dolby Noise Reduction, 5-LED Peak Indicators, a Standby Timer Facility, JVC's electronic governor motor and more. The KD-15 is a high value, high performance deck at a budget price.

NOW $$229^{95}$

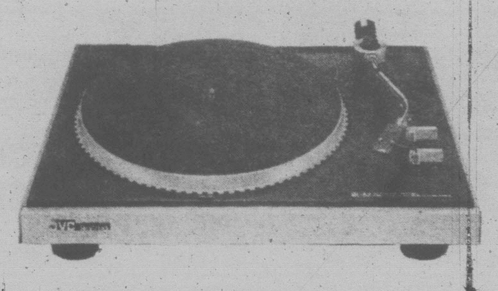
QUARTZ AUTO-RETURN TURNTABLE



The QL-A2 delivers the same accuracy and dependability of all JVC Quartz units. In addition to its first-rate specifications of 0.025% wow/flutter (WRMS) and 72dB signal-to-noise ratio (DIN-B), it has an auto-return mechanism for added convenience. An accurate Quartz oscillator, JVC's Super Servo Frequency Generator and "no-cogging" Core-Less DC Servomotor are all included in the QL-A2. With the One-Row Strobe you can visually confirm speed accuracy. Other features include a Reject Lever that returns the arm during play and a Cue Lever to lift the arm up and down.

$$199^{95}$

JR-S201 INTEGRATED RECEIVER

Power output is a comfortable 35 watts per channel, min. RMS, both channels driven, into 8 ohms, over a 20 to 20,000Hz range, with no more than 0.03% total harmonic distortion. You get DC amplifier technology, exclusive S.E.A. Graphic Equalizer and S.E.A. Recording, and other admirable advantages.
Ordinary receivers have only two or three controls for tonal adjustment, but this inexpensive model has as many as five!

to invent low-noise home equalizers to invent the 10-octave pre-amp/equalizer to invent the CLASS H amplifier to invent the high performance 114 dB S/N, 44 dB range, home equalizer

EQUALIZERS are used everywhere in the music-making chain: by live performers, recording studios, mixing consoles, AM and FM stations, and so on. In every step, each of the engineers use EQUALIZERS to make the music sound the way they think it should sound. So after everyone else makes the music sound the way they like it, it's up to you to use that same instrument — THE EQUALIZER — to make the final adjustment, and make the music sound the way YOU like it to sound in your own home.

WE SOUND BETTER

The Marantz 2216 delivers a minimum continuous power output of 16 watts per channel across the full band-width from 20 Hz to 20 kHz, with no more than 0.5% total harmonic distortion, both channels driven into 8 ohms. And an impressive number of the design concepts featured in more expensive Marantz receivers.

Inside and out, the Model 2216 is every inch a Marantz. Even so, we've managed to keep the price down to less than you might expect to pay for an ordinary receiver.

The Model 2216. Why settle for just any receiver when you can have a Marantz.

The least expensive Marantz receiver is still a Marantz.

YAMAHA AUDIO

Distortion Cut In Half—
To An Incredible 0.05%

Yamaha's first complete receiver line, with 0.1% distortion, astounded the audio world. Others rushed to improve their performance specs, but no other manufacturer has equalled that figure for its whole line. Now, in the new Yamaha receiver line, IM and total harmonic distortion are reduced even further, to 0.05%. Makers who had not succeeded in matching the 0.1% figure are going to find it even harder to attain the new Yamaha level of 0.05%!

ALL YAMAHA AUDIO PRODUCTS (EXCEPT CASSETTE DECKS) ARE BACKED BY A FULL FIVE YEAR WARRANTY ON ALL PARTS AND LABOUR.

ESS amt 1b

Like all loudspeakers in the ESS amt line, the amt 1b is equipped with a specially designed Bextrene low frequency driver. In addition to the cast-frame Bextrene driver, the amt 1b utilizes a 12" passive radiator. The combination of a Bextrene driver plus passive radiator eliminates the distortion added by a port or the loss of efficiency caused by an acoustic suspension design.

Its substantial, articulate bass response is an appropriate counterpart to the Heil driver's incisive clarity in the higher registers.

SOUND VALUE $599.95

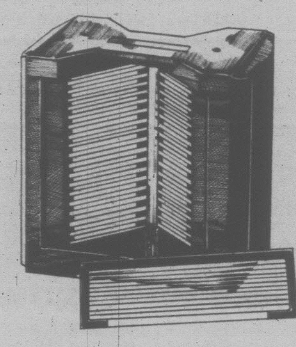
Heil air-motion transformer



The amt 1b utilizes a full-size Heil air-motion transformer incorporating an improved focusing system. A small alteration has resulted in an audibly clearer, smoother performance. Frequencies above 1,000 Hz are reproduced by the highly efficient Heil system shown.

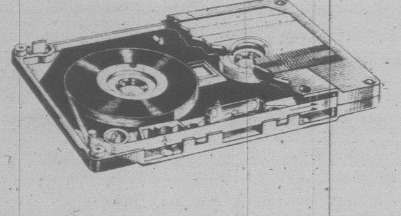
maxell UD C90



Today, Maxell cassettes—as in other areas of tape technology—are the standard by which other tapes, and often even the tape recorders themselves are judged. The reasons include the tape within the cassette, as well as the cassette shells. Unlike open reel, cassettes are entire tape systems within themselves, combining the need for superior tape plus a high degree of craftsmanship when creating and assembling the shell itself.
